Puerto Rico plan faces opposition

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — President Ford's proposal to make Puerto Rico the 51st state faces opposition in both Puerto Rico and Congress. President-elect Carter says any move for statehood should originate in Puerto Rico.

Carter told reporters today that "until the Puerto Rican people themselves express a preference for statehood, the Congress should not make any move."

"But I would be perfectly willing to see Puerto Rico become a state if the people who live there prefer that," he told reporters in Americus, Ga.

Ford said Friday that he would submit legislation to make the island commonwealth a state to the new Congress.

"I have long felt that they have made tremendous progress — very sufficient economic and social and political progress," and they should now have "all the rights and benefits that other Americans have," Ford said.

Asked why he did not leave the issue for Carter, Ford replied, "because I'm president until Jan. 20."

Deputy Press Secretary John Carlson said that Ford long has favored statehood for Puerto Rico and decided to push for it after the results of the Nov. 2 election there indicated Puerto Rican sentiment in that direction.

Rep. Herman Badillo, DN.Y., the only voting Puerto Rican member of Congress, said Congress should set up a referendum to let Puerto Ricans choose from three options — independence, statehood and commonwealth.

Puerto Rico's governor-elect, Carlos Romero Barcello, who takes office Sunday, said he favors statehood as the best solution to the island's "status" dilemma but added, "I have a commitment not to be pushing for statehood until we are well on the way to economic recovery."

Puerto Rico, with a population of 2.7 million, has more than 20 per cent unemployment.

A spokesman for the Puerto Rican Independence Party said Ford's recommendation was "an insult and a gift given in bad taste to the people of Puerto Rico."

The New YorkCity-based Puerto Rican Solidarity Committee, which supports independence for the commonwealth, said in a statement that "statehood is neither desirable nor possible."

The President said he would propose the statehood legislation despite a recommendation by an advisory group that sugggested a "compact of permanent union" between Puerto Rico and the United States.

Former Sen. Marlow Cook of Kentucky, who headed the advisory group on Puerto Rico, said he thinks Ford, "will have an uphill fight in Congress." He said his group had not recommended statehood because it was considered a long way off.

Into a new year

It's the same old sunset in the same sky over Sedalia but to some it took on a new look Saturday with the beginning of 1977. With Liberty Park lagoon frozen over, clumps of unmelted snow and ice gave the appearance of tiny icebergs across its surface.

Chicago fire kills seven

Kids dropped to safety

By The Associated Press

About 10 young children were dropped from second and third floor windows into outstretched "fire net" overcoats held by neighbors on the ground as flames swept through a Chicago apartment building, eyewitnesses reported. Seven persons died in the fire, one of several that killed at least 17 persons around the nation on New Year's Day.

In the fire that swept the three-story building on Chicago's near northwest side, nine persons were injured and firemen were looking for a missing person. An eyewitness said the children dropped from the windows apparently were not injured. The cause of the fire was not known.

Six of the seven persons killed were identified by the Cook County Coroner's office as Daniel Olmeda, 34, Ramon Carrasquillo, 46, Violetta Carraquillo, 21, Ramon Carrasquillo, 2, Malagrow Gomez, 20, and Crelensia Olmeda, age unknown.

A seventh victim was not immediately identified.

Four persons injured in the blaze were hospitalized, three in serious condition. Five others, including a fireman, were treated for minor injuries and released.

In New York, fire officials said a grandmother and three of her grandchildren were killed in a fire, apparently caused by a gas explosion, in a two-story frame house in Queens.

Names of the New York victims were withheld pending notification of relatives.

In Grand Rapids, Mich., six children, ages six to nine, died when a fire raged through their two-story frame house. Fire officials said the children were found huddled in their upper-level bedroom where they apparently had died of smoke inhailation.

Five of the victims were children of Mrs. Celia Moore, who was not at home when the blaze broke out, firemen said.

Berlin wall

E. Germans tighten controls

BERLIN (AP) — Communist East Germany tightened controls at the wall dividing East and West Berlin on Saturday by requiring foreigners to obtain a visa and pay a new $2 fee to enter East Berlin.

The East Germans also shortened the deadline for visitors to leave East Berlin to midnight on the day they enter, instead of letting visits run for 24 hours as previously.

Before the new regulation, announced Thursday and effective New Year's Day, non-Germans got free passes that were not stamped into passports.

New Year's visitors returning from East Berlin said their passports had been stamped and that they had to pay a visa fee of $2. This was in addition to the old requirement that a minimum of $2.80 be changed into East German marks.

Thus the minimum cost for a day's trip through the wall to East Berlin now stands at $4.80.

This puts non-Germans into the same category as West Germans not living in West Berlin. They have been paying a $2 fee for one-day visas valid until midnight and also were required to buy the East German marks.

West Berliners fall into another category and pay no personal fees at all. Under an official agreement, the West German government pays for the West Berlin Germans in a lump sum anually.

The East German Communist party newspaper Neues Deutschland described the new regulation in an editorial as "a completely normal matter," rebutting suggestions that the Western powers occupying Berlin — The United States, Britain and France — should be concerned about it.

Neues Deutschland said the change was prompted by what it called bargain hunters coming into the Communist part of the city from West Berlin.

Allied military police at Checkpoint Charlie, opposite the main wall crossing point used by non-Germans, said allied military personnel moved into East Berlin as before, without any controls.

Since traffic was light New Year's Day, it was not clear how the new regulation would affect processing when hundreds of people at a time crowd crossing points on the wall.

American soldiers at Checkpoint Charlie said that despite the light traffic, the East Germans had increased their guard strength and that officers came repeatedly to wall openings to see what was happening on the Western side.

A musical treasury

Librarian Don Morton examines the first cast album of "Shuffle Along" ever compiled. This early 1920s musical marked a major milestone in the evolution of black influence on the American stage. This record and 19 others have been received free by the library from the Rockefeller Foundation. The library will continue to receive 80 additional records through 1978.

New records at library focus on American music

By Ron Jennings
Staff Writer

For the jazz buff who thinks he's heard it all: for the ragtime fan who swears he's listened to every syncopated song ever written: and for everyone else with just an ounce of interest in their country's kaleidoscope musical heritage — Don Morton's got news for you.

Morton's message comes in the form of the first two shipments of the Recorded Anthology of American Music, which recently arrived at the Sedalia Public Library. Just scanning these first several albums is enough to excite the most jaded listener. For enthusiasts, it's a tantalizing introduction to a tapestry of song and sound which will probably be unparalleled in its range and scope.

The anthology is a bicentennial gift of the Rockefeller Foundation which, when completed in 1978, will consist of 10 separate 10-record collections. These records follow not only melodic mainstreams, but, also, rarely-touched undercurrents to form a complete collage of our nation's music from Basin Street to Broadway.

In short, there's something for everyone to savor and, best of all, discover.

Among the early arrivals at the library is "Shuffle Along, a 1921 black Broadway musical by Noble Sissle and Eubie Blake. Still going strong in his 90s, Blake was a hit at the first Sedalia ragtime festival.

Each album in the Rockefeller collection is complemented by photographs and notes.

The collection's ragtime album is entitled "Maple Leaf Rag: Ragtime in Rural America." Instead of selecting from the many recordings made during the past few years, the album emphasizes performances which are obscure — but refreshingly so. Hence, there is "Atlanta Rag" by Cow Cow Davenport, "Piccolo Rag" by "Blind Boy" Fuller and Joplin's "The Entertainer" performed by Buck Johnson and his band. Maple Leaf Rag is picked out on the guitar by the Rev. Gary Davis (1896-1972).

Two other notable albums among those received so far are "Aaron Copland: Works for Piano 1926-1948," and "Jive at Five: The Style-Makers of the 1920's-1940's."

A brief sampling of other titles already received by the library is enough to reveal what promises to be the rich diversity of this unprecedented series. They include: "Bebop;" "The Golden Age of the American March;" "The Birth of Liberty, music of the American Revolution;" "When I Have Sung My Songs, the American art song, 1900-1940;" and "Country Music in the Modern Era, 1940's-1970's."

Of course, there are more albums to come — 80, to be precise. Since he hasn't yet received any advance catalogues, Morton assumes he will be waiting with everybody else to see what new additions to this collection will consist of.

"I don't know what they'll send us next, but it will be interesting to think about what they might send us," he said. "All I can say is, I think there's eventually going to be something for everybody."

K.C. names new police chief

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City's Board of Police Commissioners stripped the "acting" from the title of Marvin Van Kirk Saturday and made him head of the department.

Chief Van Kirk is 47 and has been a member of the force for almost 20 years.

He succeeds Joseph D. McNamara, the scholarly young New Yorker who followed Clarence M. Kelley here almost three years ago and in November became chief of police for San Jose, Calif.

"Marvin has a fine record," said Ilus W. Davis, former mayor who is president of the police board. "He has served in a large number of capacities, and in each he has discharged his responsibilities with distinction."

Davis said the board reviewed 40 to 50 applications, most of them from outside the department.

"He had the qualifications we were seeking," Davis said of Van Kirk. "He was the best man at a given moment."

There was some friction when the board through McNamara from the outside to succeed Kelley after Kelley became director of the FBI.

Van Kirk graduated from high school in Independence, Mo., and got a bachelor's degree in business administration from Rockhurst College in Kansas City. He attended the law school at the University of Missouri-Kansas City and has a master's degree in public services from Central Missouri State University.

Van Kirk got his academic degrees after he joined the police force as a patrolman in 1957. After 2½ years on beats in all parts of the city, he was promoted to corporal and assigned to the detective division.

He has been commander of the department's planning and research department, commander of the Northeast Patrol Division and since 1974 commander of the personnel division.

When he was appointed acting chief three months ago he served notice he was going to do the best he could to get the job on a permanent basis. He said the board made it clear to him then that this was within his power.

Van Kirk will get $36,936 a year, one step on the pay scale below what McNamara was making.

McNamara said the main reason he left was because the Missouri Legislature refused to lift the ceiling on the chief's salary scale and he had gone as far as he could go.

Crews, helicopters help save wildlife from spill

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Noise made by helicopters and cleanup crews apparently saved most of the Delaware River's waterfowl population from being covered by oil spilled from a Liberian tanker, a federal wildlife official says.

Ken Chitwood, of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Commission, said Friday that the majority of the river's bird population moved to nearby inland marshes because of noise from helicopters flying overhead and crews cleaning up the spill from the tanker Olympic Games.

Meanwhile, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., says a congressional committee may investigate the causes of three accidental oil spills off Delaware, Connecticut and Massachusetts.

The hull of the Olympic Games ripped open when the tanker, loaded with 17 million gallons of Arabian crude, struck a rock Monday while attempting a docking maneuver. Nearly 134,000 gallons of the light oil spilled into the river, creating a 34-mile long oil slick.

Chitwood said the bird population at this time of year between here and Artificial Island, N.J., normally ranges from 30,000 and 60,000. Now only about 6,000 remain on the shore, he said.

He estimated that between 500 and 700 birds from the Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware shores of the river have died from the spill. More than 200 others have been picked up and cleaned.

The Coast Guard said most of the oil had evaporated or been cleaned up by Thursday evening. Work crews cleaning up the shorelines in three states were hampered by cold weather and ice, the spokesman said. They were reduced for the weekend.

The captain of the ship, Vasilios Vlismas, is free on $50,000 bail pending a hearing in federal court Jan. 17. He is charged with violating federal pollution laws.

Hollings said the Senate Commerce Committee, of which he is a member, has scheduled hearings on Jan. 11 and 12. The committee, chaired by Sen. Warren Mgnuson, D-Wash., will want to know what caused the Argo Merchant to run aground off Nantucket Island.

Painters bridge two states

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP) — Audrey Tatum works between Mississippi and Louisiana, but it takes him 4½ years to make the trip.

Tatum makes his living painting the Mississippi River bridge between Natchez and Vidalia, La.

"With an experienced crew of five men, it takes 4½ years to do the job from one end of the bridge to the other," said Tatum. "By the time you work your way all the way across, it's time to start on the other end again."

Right now, Tatum, 44, and three crewmates are about one-third the way across the bridge toward Louisiana on his current trip.

Painting a Mississippi River bridge is different from splashing paint on the living room wall. There's climbing, for one thing.

"I definitely climb," said Tatum. "I'm the leadoff man for the others. They're still learning, and I have to show them how to rig for the bridge. We try to paint the bridge every day the weather permits. We work five days a week, eight hours a day."

The normal working day begins at 7 a.m. at offices located in the bridge's old toll gate building.

"We mix paint at the office and then load up the trucks and go down to the bridge," Tatum said. "We work until noon and then knock off for lunch.

First step in the painting is sandblasting away the rust that Old Man River and his moisture cause, then applying a red lead primer coat. The finishing coat of aluminum paint goes over that.

It isn't the heights at which the men must paint that really makes the bridge job perilous. Tatum said no workman has been killed or injured on the bridge job. The danger comes from the speeding traffic.

As the Romans do

Streaks of fireworks fill the sky as residents of Rome welcome in the New Year. Ancient tradition dictates that Romans herald the new year by throwing old household objects from their windows. # Mexico Congress shelves penal reform legislation

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican Congress has effectively shelved penal reform legislation submitted as the result of a campaign led by U.S. inmates seeking parole from prisons in Mexico.

Despite Friday's congressional adjournment until next September, eight Americans as well as 23 other prisoners say they are continuing a hunger strike in support of the legislation, which would reinstate parole rights for drug offenders.

Parole for inmates convicted on drug charges was removed in 1972 when Mexico and the United States launched a joint campaign to wipe out narcotics smuggling.

About 600 Americans are in Mexican prisons, most held in connection with drug violations. About 100 of them went on a hunger strike Dec. 4 in an effort to back up their demands for parole legislation.

A spokesman said Thursday that most of the prisoners had started eating again when it became clear the Mexican Congress would take no action now on the legislation.

However, a statement given to a reporter on Friday by one of the protesting prisoners said the hunger strike was still being carried on by eight U.S. citizens, a Canadian and 22 Latin Americans.

Mexican law allows the president to call special sessions of Congress, and a permanent commission made up of both houses of Congress meets intermittently to approve legislation. But congressional sources say there is little likelihood the parole legislation is considered important enough for special action.

The parole bill has remained in committee since it was introduced last Sept. 7 by thenPresident Luis Echeverria, who left office Dec. 1. He was succeeded by Jose Lopez Portillo, Echeverria's finance secretary and a candidate of the governing Institutional Revolutionary party (PRI), which has been in power about 50 years.

Federal Deputy Julio Zamora told The Associated Press in an interview that the bill was under study by three committees — drugs, criminal law and health and public assistance.

"It will take some time to find a consensus before sending the initiative to the floor of the House of Representatives," Zamora said.

"The Congress will not be intimidated by hunger strikes, tourist boycotts or any other pressures," he added.

Several relatives of American inmates have met with Augusto Gomez Villanueva, the majority leader of the Mexican House of Representatives, who coordinates the legislative calendar.

Gomez Villanueva was quoted as telling the American relatives that the legislation was not dead, but needed further study.

FFA convention probably to stay in Kansas City

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Future Farmers of America convention will remain here if the city council gives a 10-year contract its approval, as expected.

During 1976, the convention used the new Bartle Hall for the first time and was asked to pay part of the costs of the facilities. Glen J. Hopkins, deputy city manager, said the organization paid about half its costs this year, but under the contract it would pay all its costs in the future.

There had been an effort by several representatives, particularly from Texas, to move the convention away from Kansas City.

The city, the FFA and the American Royal would be parties to the agreement, which automatically extends itself each year unless one of the three parties submits written notice.

Businessman a soft touch for homeless

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A Kansas City businessman felt a painful twinge of memory this week when 70 persons were forced from their apartments by a fire which destroyed virtually everything they owned.

Raymond D. Abraham, who owns a mail-order business here, stuffed about 50 pillows from his stock into his car and drove to the suburban Overland Park, Kan., apartments where officials were collecting household items for the victims.

When the pillows disappeared in about 45 minutes, he brought another 50, and planned to make still another delivery.

Abraham found himself without a home or personal belongings last July 4, when vandals broke into his Kansas City, Kan., residence and set it afire, destroying everything.

"I sympathize with them 100 per cent," Abraham said. "I know how they feel about taking anything. It takes about three weeks to get over the initial shock."

The pillows had a retail value of about $600, Abraham said.

"If it makes somebody happy for a minute, it's worth it."

Sedalians generally quiet over weekend

It was a fairly quiet New Year's Eve in Sedalia as police answered only seven disturbance calls, none of which resulted in an arrest. Only two minor accidents were reported to police between 10 p.m. Friday and 6 a.m. Saturday.

Those people around town who celebrated appeared to have behaved themselves. Police made only one arrest for public intoxication and none for driving while intoxicated.

However, about 11:28 p.m., would-be thieves apparently attempted to break into Roth's Department Store, Thompson Hills Shopping Center.

Police, answering an alarm at the business, found a rock thrown through a glass skylight. The thieves were apparently frightened off before they could gain entry to the building.

In other police news:

— Kenneth Joe Wasson, 1318 South Arlington, reported that $880 in cash was taken from his billfold after he apparently lost it near the Federal Building between 3 and 3:15 p.m. Friday. The billfold minus the cash was found by a postal employe in a mailbox in front of the building.

— Two black men, about 19-years-old, reportedly shoplifted three suits and three pairs of pants from Kingscourt Factory Outlet, 222 South Ohio, about 12:23 p.m. Friday. A store employe told police that the two came into the store, tried on the clothes and then left wearing the items. Value for the loss was set at over $100.

— Elwood Lewis, 704 North Grand, reported the theft of a barrel of scrap copper from a shed at his home Thursday afternoon. The padlock was pried from the shed's door to gain entry. Value for the copper was placed at $55.

— Tools valued at $50 were stolen from Stuart Refrigeration Service, 509 East Third, Thursday afternoon. Pearl Stuart, 1201 State Fair Blvd., told police he left the business about noon Thursday and returned at 2 p.m. to find the back door pushed open and tools missing.

Carter meeting planned with Britain's Callaghan

LONDON (P) — Plans are under way for Prime Minister James Callaghan to meet President-elect Jimmy Carter's inauguration Jan. 20, government sources said.

The sources said Callaghan will be accompanied by Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland. The trip is viewed as an attempt by Britain's Labor government to get acquainted with Carter's new administration.

The sources said Callaghan will fly to the United States aware that Carter, unlike some former presidents and senior congressmen, has no special links with or affection for Britain.

President John F. Kennedy, for example, lived in London when his father, Joseph Kennedy, was ambassador to the Court of St. James. President Dwight D. Eisenhower was stationed here as supreme Allied commander in World War II.

Carter, government officials said, has visited Britain only once. As governor of Georgia in 1972 he was a guest of the Central Office of Information. Senior officials regard that visit as fortunate because Carter apparently liked the country.

But those who have met him claim that he regards Britain as one of a group of second-rate powers that have fallen on hard times.

British officials will be watching the Carter administration closely for any attempts to expand the U.S. economy. They reason that this would spur British exports to the United States and help lead Britain out of the economic doldrums.

Cold claims four lives in St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Four men were found frozen to death in the St. Louis area as temperatures fell to 10 below zero, breaking a 112-year record for Dec. 31.

A fifth man was in critical condition, suffering from exposure as the area recorded its coldest day since Jan. 23, 1963, when the mercury fell to 11 below.

At 7 a.m. Friday the body of Danny C. Robinson, 30, of De Soto was found in front of his home. Police said he died of exposure.

At 7:25 a.m. Johnny Beard, 57, of St. Louis was found in a north St. Louis alley behind a stack of crates, apparently erected as a windbreak. A dead fire was nearby, police said.

At 7:30 a.m. Horace Currie, 55, was found sitting in a chair in a littered vacant lot in north St. Louis. The fire in a nearby barrel had gone out, police said. A passerby said he saw Currie sitting in the same chair at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Both Beard and Currie died of exposure, according to a spokesman at City Hospital.

At 9:45 a.m. the body of an unidentified man, apparently in his 20s, was found behind a Hazelwood furniture store. Police found $21 in his pocket, but no identification.

Frank Gust, 61, was found back of his home in south St. Louis at 7:55 a.m. He apparently slipped on the ice while getting out of his car Thursday and was knocked unconscious.

Gust was in critical condition at City Hospital suffering from exposure.

Woman strangled in Chicago cold; children survive

CHICAGO (AP) — Tara Dunlap and her 6-week-old sister survived with only cold toes, but police say their mother was strangled after she and the girls took a ride with a stranger.

A man walking his dog found the two children huddled near the frozen body of their partially clad mother, at dawn Friday, police said.

Elizabeth Dunlap, 28, of Anguilla, Miss., was strangled and left in a West Side alley after she reportedly accepted a ride from a man in his early 20s, officials said.

Despite subzero temperatures, 6-week-old Tonile and her sister, Tara, 4, were in good condition at Loyola University Medical Center in Maywood where they were treated for shock and frostbite.

Officials at first thought Tara would have to have some toes amputated after withstanding an overnight low of 7 below zero.

"She does have some exposure on her toes, but she is going to be all right. They're both just under observation now and the family has come by," said a hospital spokeswoman.

Police found the woman's purse and more than $30 next to her body, but her underclothing was missing. They said there was no medical evidence she had been raped.

Authorities said Mrs. Dunlap was visiting her mother in Chicago but had packed and left with her children about 2 a.m. after a family argument.

Two sisters told police they were standing at a bus stop, trying to persuade Mrs. Dunlap to return to the house, when a stranger stopped his car and offered a ride.

Question
Is there any difference between a Memorial Service and a Funeral Service?

Answer
Not too long ago the terms were interchangeable. Now the term "Memorial Service" has come to have a different meaning.

A funeral service is still a religious ceremony in a church or funeral chapel with the body present and followed subsequently by burial or cremation.

A memorial service is defined by the Association of Memorial Societies as the occasion for a religious observance or a philosophical meditation. This service is held after the body has been cremated and is usually held some place other than the church or funeral chapel.

'Child abuse' due to rare defect

Couple fights legal mixup

MILWAUKEE (AP) — When their infant son fractured 10 bones, Michael and Barbara Schoenfield were accused of child abuse. They nearly lost custody before doctors traced the injuries to a rare birth defect which will probably kill the child before he is 2.

"There was total lack of due process," Schoenfield said in an interview about the legal entanglements in which the couple found themselves. "A total lack of sensitivity."

Mrs. Schoenfield said that when she brought newborn Justin home from the hospital three months ago, she had a feeling the baby was not healthy.

"The doctors kept saying he was normal, but I could tell something was wrong," she said.

Soon the baby needed surgery for a double hernia. Then he began having seizures.

Doctors first thought it was epilepsy, but they later found 10 fractures which they said could only have been caused by abuse.

"They said we were shaking the child so hard that we broke his bones and that brought on the seizures," Mrs. Schoenfield said.

X rays showed none of the skull fractures that usually accompany such cases, but the Milwaukee County Welfare Department filed a court petition to remove the baby from the couple's custody because of alleged abuse.

The Schoenfields, both 28 and college graduates, insisted on their innocence, but a doctor suggested they get psychiatric help. They said they had to threaten court action to see Justin's medical records. A nurse said the parents showed only an "adequate" amount of concern for their baby. And a social worker told them they would probably be divorced soon.

They were finally cleared when a specialist determined that Justin was suffering from Menkes Kinky Hair, a rare metabolic birth defect which makes the bones extremely weak and brittle. Justin is expected to live another two months to two years.

"No one would listen to us or believe us and everyone was accusatory," Mrs. Schoenfield said. "We're upset about the way it was handled and we think our rights were violated."

"We have a switch from child abuse to parent abuse," said Angelo Greco, the couples' attorney, after the custody petition was dismissed in Children's Court.

"We don't want to sue anybody," Mrs. Schoenfield said, "but we do want to do something to make sure this does not happen again."

The couple said they have accepted the specialist's diagnosis, and realize the disease is terminal.

"We're very upset that our child is going to die, but we're happy to have him home again," Mrs. Schoenfield said. "He's a joy to have. We love him, and our relationship is stronger than ever."

Historic Russian clothes on display

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Glory of Russian Costume," a lavish and varied collection of historic Russian clothes that have never before been shown outside the Soviet Union, is now on exhibit at the Metropolitan Museum of Art here.

The exhibition includes a selection of costumes that belonged to historical figures such as Peter the Great and Catherine the Great and to the aristocracy. There are colorful costumes of the ordinary peasants, and the sumptuous garments of the "rich peasants" — all of the 18th and 19th centuries. Also featured are a few artifacts of the 11th and 12th centuries.

The costumes have been lent by Soviet museums, among them the Kremlin in Moscow and the Hermitage in Leningrad, and the exhibition has been made possible by a grant from the SCM Corp.

Mao's widow and her network

London Economist News Service

LONDON — Mrs. Mao and her friends ran a network of over and undercover agents throughout China that would be the envy of the CIA or the KGB. Their standard procedure was much the same as these agencies' when operating on enemy soil.

This is the picture emerging from China's provinces these days as one provincial radio after another comes out with a startling tale of how local radicals supporting Mrs. Mao bribed, intimidated and sabotaged their way to power.

One evident purpose of these revelations is to justify a thoroughgoing purge of alleged local supporters of Mrs. Mao and the "gang of four." Another is to explain away the persistence of bitter local conflicts more than two months after the radical ringleaders were arrested in Peking.

The purge was undoubtedly ordered by Chairman Hua himself — to ensure that key provincial jobs are in the right loyal hands and to prepare the way for reconstituting the party's central committee, which always includes a proportion of provincial leaders. So far it seems to hit only the middle and lower levels of local party organizations; except in Shanghai, none of the top secretaries has disappeared.

But party purges take on a momentum — and a fury — of their own, particularly in the wake of what is now revealed to have been a particularly vicious struggle. So reports of unrest need not signify either a loss of control by Hua's forces or a radical resurgence.

A number of provinces have admitted continuing instability: Kwangtung, where the gang's poison "is still very strong;" Kiangsi, where tension has eased "somewhat;" Fukien, which still has "many problems;" Hupeh, about which Hua is "extremely concerned."

But there is no solid evidence of a last-ditch stand by local radicals, except once again in Shanghai: an attempt to arm the militia in this former radical stronghold was foiled a few days after the anti-radical coup.

One other radical probable exception is Fukien, opposite Taiwan, where last month on orders from Chairman Hua, local army units fanned out across the province to assist local authorities in maintaining order. Fukien has been a trouble spot for months. The Fukien newspaper has called for a "mammoth people's war" against the radicals and their "handful" of local collaborators.

"Handful" is a stock phrase in every Chinese purge. So is the Maoist directive to "cure the sickness to save the patient" — meaning limit the number of victims and rely more on reform than on punishment.

This time Peking has coined a new slogan counselling moderation: "We should never knock down people at one stroke as the gang of four did." But the fact that these slogans — and a plea not to form fighting groups or settle old scores — have had to be repeated with such urgency in so many places suggests that local vendettas against the leftists may well be getting out of hand.

Rent control spreading

NEW YORK (AP) — Rent control may soon spread from the East Coast to other parts of the nation, triggered by a new round of rent increases, reports House & Home Magazine.

Among those who think there might be stepped-up action for rent control is John Williamson, general counsel for the National Apartment Association, Washington, D.C.

"You have to increase rents. There are going to be apartment shortages, tenants are more militant," said Williamson, who predicted "more action for rent control might assert itself" soon.

Bored Alaskans turn to alcohol

Demon rum a growing problem on America's last frontier

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Even for a Saturday, it had been a rough night. The jail was busy. The hospital was busy.

About 2 a.m., the police brought in one fight's drunken loser who was so banged up it took the nurses a few minutes to discover his nose was missing.

Half an hour later, a police officer showed up with the shredded appendage, and the weary surgeon went to wok.

Alcoholism, and all its accoutrements — crime, suicide, just plain trouble — are the bane of Alaska, and especially northwest Alaska where the alcoholism rate is one of the highest in the world and still growing.

Alaska leads the nation in per capita alcoholic intake — 3.86 gallons a year for everyone over 15. One of every 10 people in a state with 360,000 population is an alcoholic or a problem drinker. The problem is especially bad among Eskimos (nearly 20 per cent of the total population) in small bush towns like Nome, on the Bering Sea coast, only 120 miles from Siberia.

Perhaps it is that day and night lose meaning in the land of the midnight sun.

Last year 1,277 drunk and disorderly arrests were logged in this old gold mining town. it only has 2,500 residents.

Police Chief Cecil Johnson says 99 per cent of Nome's crime is related to alcohol. The hospitals say 99 per cent of their emergency cases involve alcohol. District Court Judge Ethan Windhal says:

"If it weren't for demon rum, I wouldn't have a job."

Help is far away. There is no detoxification center in the area. If the hospital and the town's one psychologist decide a patient needs such help, he or she is flown to Anchorage for treatment in the state's primary alcoholism facility. Some go in straightjackets.

There are very few hardcore criminals in Nome. "Most of the offenses here involve someone getting drunk and then doing something stupid," said Johnson. "Most of the people around here are robust and like to drink."

Last year there were three murders, six rapes, 10 auto thefts, 32 burglaries, 21 cases of joy-riding, and one incident of child abuse.

Two persons killed themselves and 38 more tried "by any means you can think up — shooting, pills, hanging," said Ed Ward, chief investigator in the 10-man department. "We managed to talk a lot of people out of it because they generally were intoxicated."

About 85 per cent of Nome's population is Eskimo. Many arrests involve Eskimo visitors from the several dozen villages. Most of the visiting offenders are model citizens, police say. But when they come to town ...

"This is not a dangerous place, it's a peaceful town," Johnson insists. "It's just that people like to drink a lot."

Why drink? Unless you are a devout churchgoer, a television addict or a voracious reader, that's about the only thing to do.

Long ago white men taught the Eskimos to drink, and since then there has been no effective effort to teach them not to.

"There are some repeat prisoners who come before me in court whose alcoholism problems just can't be cured by the techniques we know," said Windahl. "An awful lot of the people I'm describing have permanent brain damage from alcohol."

A former Legal Services attorney appointed to the bench three years ago, Windahl has been criticized by many Nome residents as being too lenient.

"I don't believe in putting people in jail for an alcohol-related offense if it is minor," says the tall, lanky man in jeans. "In many cases, I assume it is some sort of problem that can be dealt with on a personal level. But it is so terribly frustrating to see some of the same people over and over again."

Windahl recently began cooperating with a native organization's fledgling family services center by sentencing some repeat alcoholic defendants to spend varying amounts of time in an Antabuse program. To avoid jail, the person must regularly take the medication, which causes violent nausea if liquor is consumed. If they do not cooperate in the program, their parole is revoked and they are sent to jail.

Although it is too soon to assess results accurately, Windahl says the program is moderately successful.

The judge is also hopeful a new Alaska law will cut down on the number of cases before his court. The law allows police to pick up a drunk and hold him in jail for 12 hours in "protective custody" without formal charge.

Police generally favor the law because it may cut down on fights and crime and protect the drunks from stumbling off into the below-zero wilderness.

Johnson says every year a few lose consciousness in a snowbank and freeze to death. Most of the victims' bodies remain hidden until spring thaw.

Windahl says alcoholism in northwest Alaska has no racial boundaries.

"Some glibly say a breakdown in the Eskimo culture causes the people to resort to alcohol," said the judge. "Maybe I'm a dimestore anthropologist, but it seems to me we have so many people raising a ruckus because so often here a person is not deemed drunk until he has passed out. If there is no violence, people just tend to get out of the way.

"If I behaved that way at a cocktail party in Southern California, everybody would be appalled at my behavior ..."

Not just town drunks. Youngsters too.

Dr. Steve Harrison received a frantic telephone call in Nome one bleak Monday morning. It was from an anguished father.

"Okay, everything's going to be all right, we'll send a plane down to White Mountain and you just bring her on in to the hospital and we'll take care of her," said northwest Alaska's only psychologist.

He hung up and called the hospital to alert doctors that a young alcoholic with psychotic tendencies was on her way.

Harrison is director of Norton Sound Health Corporation's Family Serrvices Center, a two-year-old, government-financed mental health organization.

Its primary function is to counsel people who drink too much. It also tries to prevent people from killing themselves.

"When you talk about drinking in northwest Alaska, you're talking about something that reaches into every facet of life here," said Harrison, a longhaired Californian who's been in town only six months. "Most of the people ... walked in the door because they were hurting."

"Court referrals have been mostly young kids in their late teens or early 20s who generally learn to drink at home because their parents do," said Harrison's assistant, Barry Levit. "Here there is no such thing as 'social drinking.'"

Officials say alcoholism costs the state $17.8 million annually. That includes direct treatment, welfare money, police services and court fees. The center, with a full-time staff of seven, is hiring native employes to train as counselors "so the alcoholic Eskimos up here can relate to the people who are offering help," Levit said.

He and the rest of the office staff work out of a two-story Front Street building just a block from most of Nome's bars and across the street from the jail.

The top floor has been converted into a "day hospital," a place Levit describes as a room where "people can lie down, play ping pong, drink coffee, work with crafts, fight the desire for a drink, get their head together and not be hassled."

But on Saturdays, because of short staff, the center is closed.

Nome police beat

Police officer Guy Martin stands in front of the police station in Nome, Alaska. Nome only has 2,500 residents, yet last year logged 1,277 drunk and disorderly arrests. About 99 per cent of the old gold mining town's crime can be related to alcohol, although there are few hard-core criminals. It seems people like to drink a lot and in Nome there's not much else to do.

White House return some 30 years later

WASHINGTON (AP) — The producer of television's "Sesame Street," who as the teenage daughter of a Broadway producer visited the Harry S. Truman family in the White House, returned here 30 years later to direct a show hosted by First Lady Betty Ford.

Dulcy Singer, producer of the educational TV series for preschoolers, recalls that at her first visit President Truman, his wife Bess and daughter Margaret were hosts to the cast of Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie." Ms. Singer's father, the late Louis J. Singer, produced the benefit show for the March of Dimes at Washington's National Theater.

Burns, Meany questions cloud financial picture

NEW YORK (AP) — While everyone wonders who Jimmy Carter will choose next for a high administration position, there are some other intriguing questions to which we might not soon have any clear-cut answers.

1. How does Arthur Burns do it? The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, which controls monetary policy, has already served under Presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Ford.

Throughout his years in office he has been under criticism that sometimes became very heavy, as when he declined to cooperate with Johnson in the President's guns and butter policy of 1968.

At various times he has been accused of being overly conservative, and sometimes it has been said that he accommodated monetary policy to the political aspirations of the incumbent, but nobody has ever pinned this down.

More recently he has been criticized by the President-elect, who feared that the Fed's independence might be too great, and there was much speculation that he would be under pressure to resign.

Through it all, Burns has persevered, and now it looks as if he will continue to serve willingly, happily, and on invitation of Carter.

2. Will George Meany support Carter uncritically? The President-elect now has the strong support of the AFL—CIO, which recently quoted Carter as saying "I'll do everything I can to reduce unemployment."

Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, was once a mild supporter of President Nixon, but when he turned he did so with a torrent of adverse criticism. And he maintained that Ford's administration was just as bad.

An article in the AFL-CIO News describes the legacy left to Carter an unemployment situation that is the equivalent of the combined populations of Alabama, Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, Maine, Montana, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont and Wyoming.

But, the first year goal of Carter is for a reduction in the 8.1 per cent unemployment rate by 1.5 per centage points, and even that, the President-elect has observed, will be difficult to obtain.

Based on the present labor force of just under 96 million, a 1.5 per cent reduction would eliminate from the above list only the equivalent of Rhode Island and Hawaii, leaving close to 6 million still without jobs.

Delaware was the first of the original 13 states to ratify the Constitution. Rhode Island was the last.

Holiday visit

By ERMA BOMBECK

"Wasn't it wonderful having our son home for the holidays?" I asked my husband.

"It certainly was," he smiled wistfully.

"I didn't realize we'd miss him so much. He's grown taller, hasn't he?"

"And looks a little too thin? I suppose a mother would notice those things before a father, wouldn't she?"

"How's he doing in school?" I asked. "He'd talk those things over with a father, wouldn't he?"

"Not really. He has matured quite a bit though, hasn't he?"

"A father would observe that right off the bat."

"If you want to know the truth," said my husband, "I never set eyes on the kid the entire three weeks he was home."

"You're kidding," I gasped.

"No, I thought I saw the back of his head once as he was backing the car out of the driveway, but I couldn't be sure. How's he doing?"

"I never saw him either."

"He WAS here, wasn't he?" asked my husband.

"Oh yes, I'm sure of that. I could see him mounded in the center of the bed. He'd get up around the crack of noon and take a shower and once I handed him the phone through the door."

"You actually saw him?"

"It was steamy, but I'm pretty sure it was him."

"Wait a minute," said my husband. "Does he have a gray sweater with three stripes on the sleeve? I think I saw him one night holding both refrigerator doors wide open like he was welcoming a convention."

"That wasn't our son, that was Mark."

"I wish I had known that. I apologized to him for not spending more time with him."

"It's a natural mistake. He was here the entire Christmas vacation. Wait a minute. There's the phone."

"Who was it?" asked my husband minutes later.

"Mark's mother. She wanted to know how her son looked and if he needed anything."

"Any news of our son?"

"He's fine and says he doesn't know if he can get home for spring vacation or not."

"How will we know for sure?" shrugged my husband.

"Just feel the hood of the car."

Off the beaten path

Some zany happenings in '76 made it vintage year all over

NEW YORK (NEA) — America's Bicentennial turned out to be a vintage year for off-beat news.

There was, for example, the chain-reaction accident in Atlanta that began when a woman, seeing a snake in her kitchen, screamed.

Her husband, taking a shower, ran in dripping, stepped on their dog, who howled. The snake slithered under a cabinet, the husband knelt down to look for it; the dog touched the husband with its cold nose; the husband, thinking it was the snake, passed out cold. The wife phoned an ambulance, the husband said he was okay; the ambulance men insisted he might have had a heart attack and put him on a stretcher; as they lifted it, the snake came out again, one ambulance man dropped the stretcher, the husband fell out and broke his leg.

what surgeons called the man they operated on at New York's Metropolitan Hospital. They suspected an abdominal tumor. What they found was over 500 metal objects, including 300 quarters, pennies, and subway tokens, can openers, parts of knives, forks, spoons, nuts, bolts, a chain and keys, and a broken thermometer. The doctors reported the 38-year-old human vacuum cleaner suffered no internal damage.

Making like Robin Hood, a Staten Island, N.Y., housewife repulsed an intruder with her husband's trusty bow and arrow. Husband John, a huntsman, was away when Mrs. Grace Lisk heard a prowler in the cellar. She grabbed one of John's bows, fitted an arrow, and let fly. The steel-tipped shaft hit the man in the shoulder. He yelled "Ouch," and fled. Mrs. Lisk ran to a neighbor who told police: "She was real excited."

A bumbling bank robber was nabbed when he fled from a bowery bank in N.Y. City and tried to stash his loot in a trash can behind a building. It turned out to be police headquarters and one of the men spotted and grabbed the robber . . . and the loot.

Living junkyard. That's

A berserk bunny bugged service on London's central subway when he jumped into a cab and bit, clawed and scratched the driver. It happened on an elevated suburban stretch of track and tied up six trains.

Calcutta police had to kill a 14-foot python which was swallowing an owl (always a slow business) on an airport runway and delaying an Air India plane waiting to land.

A young man in Taipei, Taiwan, wrote 700 letters to his girl during the past two years, proposing marriage. His persistence brought results. A Taipei newspapers reported that the woman became engaged to the postman who faithfully delivered all the letters.

Another surprise ending hit John Gunset of Omaha, Neb., who was stranded on Interstate 74 near Crawfordsville, Inc., after his car stalled. He broadcast a citizen's band radio call for help. A driver stopped on the other side of the highway, walked across, pulled a knife and robbed Gunset of $54.

Bedford, England, contributed the story of Judge Robert Lymbery, who also suffered a surprise. The judge overruled a lower court's order that a 168-pound Great Dane be destroyed. Then he gave the dog a friendly pat. The big beast promptly bit the judge's hand.

Customs officials in Munich, West Germany, nabbed five students brewing English beer in a university bathtub They charged them with violating a medieval law guarding the purity of German beer.

The Seattle Fire Department computer, in its yearly report, said department personnel had delivered six babies, five to women and one to a man. "Either the computer goofed or one delivery made medical history," the department newsletter said.

The Philadelphia Flyers hockey team had Kate Smith; when she sang "God Bless America" the team always won. The Boston Red Sox had a witch to cast spells on other teams. Both "assistants" had successful but brief runs. In Tanzania, the National Soccer Assn. hired a witch doctor to accompany the team on out-of-town games. When the government, which takes such things seriously, found out, it fired the whole committee.

And finally, the usually sobersided Soviet Union contributed its share of zany news to 1976.

One Russian citizen copped what must surely be the all-time nepotism championship, putting more relatives on the payroll of the Ukraine Agricultural Academy than most folks have. Dean V. Yruchishin, investigation showed, hired no fewer than 160 of his relatives on his teaching staff. He was also accused of "borrowing" works from other scientists for his doctorate thesis and permitting widespread cheating. The Communist party paper Pravda reported his punishment: he was expelled from the party.

Truly hairy troubles were encountered by Mrs. Lidia Pavlova of Orsk, who now wears a wig. On a visit to far-off Alma Ata, near the Chinese border, she dropped into the "beauty" parlor at the railway station to have her waves restored after her long train trip. The Kazakhstan edition of Pravda reported that when she woke the next day she had neither curls nor half her hair. When she stepped into the street, the rest of her hair blew away with the breeze. The head cosmetician told her it wasn't unusual, it was a matter of chance whether his "special chemical treatment" produced a head of beautiful curls or a bald one.

"Don't worry," he added, "it will grow back again in six months."

(Excerpted from The World Almanac and Book of Facts, 1977 edition; (c) Newspaper Enterprises Assn., New York, 1976.)

Girl's wish comes true

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — The Christmas wish of a dying East St. Louis girl came true Thursday, when Santa Claus visited her bedside.

Shelreese Holman, 5, managed a smile or two as a photographer snapped pictures of her with her distinguished guest.

"Her one desire was to have her picture taken with Santa Claus," said her mother, Mrs. Maggie Holman.

Shelreese had tried to visit Santa at a department store, but got so tired she had to abandon the effort, Mrs. Holman said.

Mrs. Holman said a malignant brain tumor has caused her daughter's strength to ebb steadily since April, when the girl had her sixth operation.

"This September she was looking forward to starting Kindergarten, but she was unable to, so she watches Sesame Street instead," Mrs. Holman said.

Doctors are treating the girl with cobalt radiation therapy and pain killers, but they have said the outlook is not rosy. "They've done all they could do," Mrs. Holman said.

Thumbs down on prison site here

The location of a medium security state prison in the Sedalia area received an affirmative response from only 12 per cent of The Democrat-Capital's readers who answered last Sunday's Sound Off question. The survey generated 25 answers.

Readers were asked: "In a poll taken recently among members of the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce, interest was expressed by members in locating a state medium security prison in this area. That information has been provided the state, but no immediate action is expected. Would you favor establishing such a facility in the Sedalia area?"

A reader who did not wish to be named wrote, "In my opinion the economic benefits are not sufficient to overcome a decline in the quality of life that would occur."

Among the few readers voting yes was U. L. Howerton, 1534 South Grand, who wrote: "Yes, I think this would be a wonderful opportunity for our city and county financially...as well as giving our unemployed a job...This prison could be made perfectly safe for all time. Why not have this to our benefit? Prisons have to be built somewhere."

Another unsigned note added this view: "Just because our Chamber of Commerce, as usual, is thinking more of the profit for their personal business than the betterment of the community, we run the risk of having a prison in this area. Why should the people of this area run more risk than we already have, of murder, rape, etc., just for the profit of a few? Missouri has many acres of near useless land in the Ozark area. I ask why not build the prison in that area, where escape could be controlled with less effort and the waste of good farm land held to a minimum."

On the positive side, a reader who did not wish to be named had this opinion: "Yes, I would favor this establishment in the Sedalia area for unemployment reasons. Most towns with prisons are a safer place to live. Also, when prisoners escape they usually try to leave the area of where they escaped. These jobs are needed so people can pay these high utility (bills) and taxes... So anything that comes into Sedalia is needed..."

Another reader who wished to remain anonymous wrote, "I am against a prison in the Sedalia area because of what happened the night the man who shot and robbed the manager of Consumer's escaped. I saw men with baseball bats checking sheds and garages, and I don't know how many people kept a loaded rifle within reach. Worse, I heard shots in five separate occasions that night."

One unsigned letter said, "We are shocked to learn that the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce favors the prison site....Would any member want the site near his property — which would be drastically devalued because of the site being near? Why not enlarge the present facilities? Wouldn't it save the taxpayers money?"

A "yes" vote was accompanied by this note: "A medium security prison in our area would be a great asset to local employment. A considerable amount of money has been spent on industrial development. In my opinion, overlooking this state institution would be foolish."

And a reader who did not want to be named wrote, "Living in the county, I must vote no even though I know this would be an economic boost to our locale. If a medium security prison was erected on an adjoining farm, my farm would substantially depreciate in value. I cannot in good conscience be for a prison site in some other area of the county when I would not want it in my neighborhood."

And finally this view from a county resident who wanted to remain anonymous:

"I believe the Chamber of Commerce should have included the following clarifier in their poll: 'This medium security prison is to be located within the Sedalia city limits.' I think it is safe to assume that a prison will not be constructed within the limits of any populated area. Therefore, it is easy for a member of the Sedalia community to express interest when he is relatively assured that this prison will not be constructed next to his business or down the street from his home.

"As a rural property owner I find the thought of a prison being located near my farm to be undesirable. I think it is unfortunate that the people most likely to be directly affected by the location of this prison were not asked to express their views," the letter concluded."

Sound Off

QUESTION — The Missouri Poll reported this week that 60 per cent of the state's residents favor ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, while 27 per cent oppose it and 13 per cent are undecided. Do you side with the majority on this question?

State invested fund total is showing hike

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The average daily percentage of state funds invested in interest-bearing deposits climbed to more than 98 per cent during the first half of the current fiscal year, the state treasurer reports.

State Treasurer James I. Spainhower said Thursday the state's available funds earned $8.5 million for the six months ending Dec. 31. That is about $800,000 less than interest revenues for the same period in 1975 despite a rise in the percentage of state monies in interest-bearing deposits.

Spainhower said reduced interest rates and increased daily expenditures by state government combined to bring interest earnings down during the first half of the 1976 fiscal year.

Environmental purity? Not readily found

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The regional administrator in Kansas City of the federal Environmental Protection Agency says 30 years in pollution control work have taught him that there is no such thing as environmental purity.

But Jerome Svore, who retires Friday, is hopeful that air and water can be cleaner in the future.

The catch, he said, is balancing environmental costs and benefits.

"Our ability to impose on other people's rights environmentally is directly proportional to our technical and scientific advances," he said. "The damage to an individual in society can be tremendous.

Svore, who has served in his current post since 1971, says technology and science have created problems not even imagined a few decades ago.

Coonhunters fear higher prices may ruin sport in the Ozarks

By RICK DOYLE
Springfield Daily News
For The Assiociated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (P) — The price of a raccoon's skin, prized by fashionable Europeans as a lining for their coats and collars, has jumped so high that hunters in the Missouri Ozarks fear one of their favorite sports is in jeopardy. "I hunt for sport, not money," says Theodore Baumgarner, who has been doing it for 35 years. "With the high price for coonskin, people are trapping and killing coons anyway they can get them."

Baumgarner is from Stockton, Mo., about 40 miles northwest of Springfield. At Ash Grove, Mo., in between, H. R. Gayer buys 3,000 to 4,000 bushy gray hides during the two-month season and ships them to an auction in New York.

Five years ago, Gayer paid around $5 apiece for them. Now it averages $17.50 and high quality skins bring $20 or more.

"Most of the hunters and trappers are not in favor of the high price," Gayer reports. "They say it is bringing more people out and they are depleting the supply of coons." There are overtones of a feud in the complaints of the hunters, who feel the high prices have brought a lot of trappers into the competition for hides.

"There are so many that you have to worry constantly about your dog stepping in a trap," says Willard Reid, who also lives at Stockton, has been hunting coons for 35 years and still goes out almost every night.

"The price of coonskin will ruin the sport," he added .

Roy S. Dickens of Springfield, who is 68 and has been hunting coons ever since he was big enough to follow his dad around, said he remembers when hides brought only 50 cents apiece about 25 years ago.

"I don't care what the price," he said. "I would still hunt if it was back at 50 cents."

To appreciate the hunters' plaints you have to know a little about their revelry.

"There is a lot of sport in coon hunting," Baumgarner said. "The dogs make a lot of noise and give the coon a chance to find a safe place."

The ritual is at night and starts with the hunters building a campfire in the woods. Each one has a dog or two or three. When the dogs are turned loose to seek the trail of a coon, the hunters gather around the fire to listen, tell lies and perhaps imbibe.

There is not a hunter who does not claim he recognizes the bawling of his dogs and can tell how close each one is in his pursuit of a coon.

The chorus of voices changes abruptly when a coon is treed. The hunters follow the sound to its frenzied source and shoot the coon down.

Local jobless rate trails behind state

Although layoffs have increased Pettis County's unemployment slightly, the overall level continues to be low.

Bill Giles, manager of the state Office of Employment Security here, said this week that the preliminary unemployment rate in the county for November was only 3.7 per cent. This is a four-tenths of a per cent increase over October, but is still well below the state average of 4.6 per cent.

Giles said December jobless figures will probably be somewhat higher, but added that layoffs in the area "are pretty well seasonal."

Misguided airlines

The Phoenix Nest

Edited by Martin Levin

By DERECK WILLIAMSON

The airlines are fighting a spreading "amenities war" to attract passengers. Earlier this year, each airline was attempting to outdo the other in offering the newest movie on the biggest screen.

Now it's a battle over booze and bagels.

A few weeks ago, Delta announced it would start giving out free drinks to coach passengers. ("Coach" is an airline euphemism for the back of the airplane. "First Class" is the front of the airplane, where you pay more, and get "free" drinks. Both ends go the same place.)

Delta's free-drink announcement prompted Eastern to follow suit. Then, according to a New York Times account:

"Delta came back with offers of free bagels and cream cheese for passengers boarding its flights between New York and Florida. Now, National has weighed in with its free drinks."

I think that the airlines are way off course. Instead of pretending to be movie theaters and bars and restaurants, they should pretend to be airlines. That would build passenger confidence, and perhaps coax a few more of us occasional flyers off the ground.

Just eliminating certain practices would help. Over the past several years I have observed some definite No-Nos, and I'd like to make the following recommendations:

1. STOP ASKING PASSENGERS TO SUPPLY FLIGHT DATA.

Our plane was about to land in Chicago, and I was in my seat, carefully watching the wing rivets. Nobody else was watching them, so I had taken on that extra responsibility. I say "extra" because I was also watching to make sure no birds flew into the starboard engine. The voice of the stewardess broke my concentration.

"Can you tell me the time, sir?"

I was instantly alarmed. Don't jets have chronometers and stop-watches and things like that? Or maybe she was nervous about landing, and wanted to make conversation.

I looked at my watch, usually accurate within 20 minutes either way. "I've got ten-thirty."

She reached for a microphone, and announced over the P.A. system: "Ladies and gentlemen, we are now landing at O'Hare International Airport. The time is ten-thirty, and on behalf of the captain and crew..."

I missed the rest of her announcement. Appalled, I was busy watching the other passengers resetting their watches to exactly 10:30. My time.

I never flew that airline again. Too much responsibility on my shoulders. I figure that next time, they'll want to know the altitude.

2. STOP CHANGING FLAT TIRES IN FRONT OF THE CUSTOMERS.

I was seeing a friend off at Newark Airport, and we were informed that the flight would be delayed. I approached an airline official, and asked why.

"The plane has a flat," he replied.

We dashed up to the observation deck. Sure enough, a bunch of guys in coveralls were jacking up the plane and changing a tire. My friend was distraught:

"It's like my own car — the spare looks even worse."

3. ELIMINATE AIRLINE EUPHEMISMS.

A card in the seat pocket tells me what to do "in the event of a water landing." Every passenger is acutely aware that the plane is not equipped to "land" in the water. It has no pontoons, just wheels. And one of those has a bald snow tire.

In front of me is a container, "for motion discomfort." Above is an oxygen mask which "will drop down, should the occasion arise." Nearby is a cushion "with flotation, if needed."

Airlines never say ditch, crash, blow up or throw up. I don't want them to show me a movie; I want them to look me in the eye.

4. AVOID SLOW, HESITANT ANNOUNCEMENTS

I had just fastened my seat belt, originally called a safety belt, on a Miami-bound jet when the pilot's voice came over the speaker.

"Good morning. This is your...er...uhh...ah...Captain speaking."

Fortunately, the man's inability to remember who he was didn't affect his flying skills. Either that, or somebody else flew the plane while our Captain memorized his own personnel records. But although it was a smooth flight to Miami, I suffered mental turbulence most of the way.

No amount of free bagels and cream cheese would have helped.

'Reasonable' prices may await shoppers

WASHINGTON (AP) — When you go shopping for meat in 1977 you'll find plenty of beef and pork and "at reasonable prices," says the nation's largest meat packing trade association.

But the American Meat Institute, an association of meat packers and wholesalers, admitted Wednesday that its idea of "reasonable prices" may set some new records at your neighborhood supermarket.

The Agriculture Department predicted recently that 1977 retail meat prices will rise throughout the year to an average of 10 cents per pound higher than this year's average of $1.39. That would be a record high price for a yearly average, although daily prices might not top the record of $1.61 set in July 1975.

A spokesman for the industry group, asked about that government forecast, said it did not conflict with the industry's estimate, indicating that the industry thinks an extra 10 cents per pound will not push meat out of the "reasonable" category.

Meat prices were stable or lower throughout 1976 after hitting record highs in 1975.

In November, beef prices averaged $1.36 per pound, compared with $1.51 in November 1975. Pork prices, meanwhile, declined for November to $1.16, a sharp drop from November 1975's record of $1.54 per pound.

The challenge

The new year is a challenge
Of what in life we face,
It can be a year of achievement
Or of shame and disgrace,
In this year that we are starting
No matter what our age
Let us print a happy message
Upon this year's blank page,
In reaching out to others
We need no certain plan
Of every precious day God gives
We do the best we can.
It takes not lots of money
For the things most worthwhile
Do not ever cost a penny,
Simply kind words and a smile,
A moment just to listen
To a lonely person speak,
That may give a bit of pleasure
With attention that they seek,
Encouragement to the young
Who perhaps have gone astray,
They, too, need a listener
To help them find their way,
Giving comfort to the ill
To inspire with new belief,
Consoling, giving strength
To those who have had grief.
The year is just beginning
Make each day paramount
In our living and our giving
And our blessing that we count,
Certainly we can hurt others
As we rudely pass them by,
Or do vandalism,
We can gossip, steal and lie,
But what great joy will come from that
As later we look back,
Against our lives will always be
A mark that's very black,
And often we will find
As time goes on we learn
The hurt we have caused others
Will one day to us return,
Yes, now the year is very new
And may the first day start
With beauty in our mind
And kindness always in our heart,
Let us turn to God for guidance
With faith in every passing day
For in life or death He comforts,
Only He can calm the way,
There's a challenge in the New Year,
Before too quickly on it rolls,
Let's accept it and set for ourselves
Both great and simple goals.

It may not be 'Oh, Promise Me' but wedding ceremony marches on

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — We can't verify this, but as we were leaving the editor-in-chief's office at Bride's Magazine recently, we could have sworn a Disney chipmunk scampered down the hall with a wreath of posies in his mouth.

And there was a plump bluebird over his head, twittering about eternal love and whether there was room at table eight for Uncle Sol.

Probably it was just a fantasy. But, then, for today's bride, the ritual of marriage involves as much fantasy as ever and possibly a good deal more sentiment. (Which may be a reaction to the fracturing of the family we keep hearing about.)

Contemporary bride

The bride, front, wears a silk crepe de chine gown, by Christos, with smocking that expands the portrait neckline into an off-the-shoulder look. Slimming waist sweeps into yards of flowing silk for a train. Silk coifs the head and drapes the back with flowers. Her bridesmaid wears a peasant fantasy look in brilliant red voile and smocked with a camisole top in calico. There is a ruffled shawl and hibiscus flower for her hair.

(NEA)

Two per cent of all Americans marry each year, which comes to 4,600,000 people, 75 per cent of whom are marrying for the first time.

While "there's no monolithic bride and no one way to get married," she said, statistics do allow for some generalities.

Our bride is now 21.4 years old. Ten years ago, she was 18. Her bridegroom, who used to be 20, is now 23 or 24. Most of both have attended college and, while we don't know about him, 70 per cent of the women have been living at home.

She and he are engaged for a year, longer than before. Their combined income, for she usually works, is $16,900, and 94 per cent of Bride's 314,000 readers expect to work for a few years after marriage, "until they decide to have children."

Mostly, today's couple differs from others in that they have lots of options. Traditional ways and means of marriage are slowly accruing other ways and means which in turn may become traditional.

For example, the Wall Street Journal, Tober notes, "says the average wedding costs $1,500." Well, why shouldn't his father shell out for some of the expenses?

What's to prevent hers from saying a few appropriate words when he's "presenting" her to the pale young man beside her? And where is it written that both parents or grandparents (or Aunt Alicia from Des Moines) can't accompany them down the aisle?

Coed showers are becoming routine — "it's his stuff, too" — some brides are indulging in "engagement ring blessing ceremonies," which are anything you want them to be, and guests are likely to receive a program of the wedding which they can cherish as a momento. That holds true of some invitations which are prepared in the form of a small scrapbook, with wedding pictures of the parents involved, in addition to informal shots of the main contenders.

But for all that, weddings are still highly stylized, no matter how they're conceived and performed.

"When you marry, it's a rite of passage from one distinctive lifestyle to another and human beings want to celebrate things like that."

And today when it's all over, the bridesmaids, whose gowns cost an average of $50, find they have an evening dress they can wear again. And, in many cases, so does the bride, whose "something wonderful" costs approximately $140.

For the past 16 years, Christos Yiannakou has been designing gorgeous gowns for Bridal Couture, and he's seen a number of styles step and halt by.

"When I started, brides wore three crinolines underneath and there had to be a bustle effect in the back with extra ruffles and lots of roses."

The '60s brought a "drastic change to the sheath, very tight, with a train in the back."

A few years ago, it was the peasant look, and now it's anything from a Mexican wedding dress to tiers of lace to a patchwork gown.

Christos' creations range from $200 to $2,000 depending on whether the lace, if there is any, is domestic or French, and how much fruit salad there is — pearls, beading, etc.

Anything goes in color, he says, although white and ivory still prevail for spring, "and I had a strong feeling this season for red in bridesmaids' gowns."

But trends notwithstanding, Tober explained, the gown that recurs in her bimonthly pages is "high necked, lace encrusted, full skirted, with a slightly raised waist long sleeves and a short train that has a veil to the floor."

Flower flattery

Stick a flower behind your ear for eveningwear — that's the newest accessory.

Silk 'n' jeans

If you're really au courant, then you're wearing a pure silk blouse with blue jeans.

Dapper dresser links fashion with jewelry

NEW YORK (AP) — Forget that old, torn T-shirt and wrinkled jeans, men. The Age of Elegance is here, says the Jewelry Industry Council.

Today men are as fashion-conscious as women and while they may never become slaves to style, indications are that the casual look in men's wear is on its way out, the council reports.

Beau Brummel is back, and he's wearing smartly tailored vested suits, fur collars on his coats and fur linings in his raincoat toppers.

Shirts with ties are back, and there's a strong trend toward French cuffs to set off handsome suitings of serge and flannel.

And, as with women's fashions, jewelry adds the finishing touch to apparel, with tie bars, pins, tie chains and cuff links and vest chains setting off collars, cuffs and waistlines.

Men's watches and watch bands are ornamental as well as functional. There are flexible metal bands, often in two tones of gold, fine leather straps in reptile, and watch faces that show lapis lazuli or mosaic opal.

Diamonds — so long taboo for men, although historically male royalty only sported them — have come full circle, and are fashion-right for men, the council says. Rings, often studded with tiny diamonds and colored stones, are big and bold. Tiger's eye, cat's eye and onyx are most popular, as are individual birthstone gems. Bold, geometric and free form designs in gold give the rings a sturdy, masculine look.

Today's new tie pins are much more imaginative than formerly, and are worn on ascots as well as on ties. The dapper dresser might well choose to wear two small pins on a tie to create a theme. For example, a tiny sculptured gold retriever pin sits below a golden pheasant in flight.

Couples repeat holiday vows

Monsees-St. Jean

A New Year's Day wedding at St. Paul's Lutheran Church united Miss Lois Monsees and Thomas St. Jean.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Monsees, 1407 South Ohio, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond St. Jean, Westfield, Mass.

The Rev. Erhard Wolf performed the 3 p.m. double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with two bouquets of white spider mums and evergreen. Mrs. Kenneth Schreiner, and Miss Melody Schreiner were the organists and Mrs. Tim Waters was the vocalist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white gown of maracaine styled with a high rounded neckline with a V-shaped inset of Venise lace. Her fitted sleeves were edged in Venise lace and the empire bodice gave way to pleats giving the skirt a full look. Her fingertip-length veil was trimmed with lace.

Miss Wanda Monsees attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a royal blue gown styled with a scooped neckline, high waistline and bishop sleeves. The waistline was accented by ribbon streamers. Miss Mona Monsees, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid. She wore a powder blue gown styled identically to that of the maid of honor.

Miss Debra Mueller and Miss Linda Monsees, cousins of the bride, were the candlelighters. Eric Monsees, brother of the bride, was the ringbearer.

Mark St. Jean, brother of the groom, served as best man. Dennis Mueller, cousin of the bride, was the groomsman. Mark Satterwhite, cousin of the bride, and the groomsman were the ushers.

The reception was held in the church basement.

The parents of the groom hosted the rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Old Missouri Homestead.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Missouri-Columbia with a Bachelor of science in physics. The groom holds a bachelor of science degree in health physics from the University of Lowell, Lowell, Mass. He is employed in Radiation Safety Department, Virginia Medical College, Richmond, Va.

The couple will be at home in Richmond.

White-Coley

In a candlelight setting of Christmas greenery and poinsettia Miss Leesa Lou White, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ira M. White, 1101 South Beacon, and Timothy Joseph Coley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Coley, Galesburg, Ill., were united in marriage in a 7:30 p.m. Tuesday wedding at Maplewood Church.

The Rev. H. James Kane performed the double ring ceremony. Mrs. Ewing Gibson, organist, accompanied Tom Franseen as he sang the wedding selections.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride chose a gown of sheer organza fashioned with a lace stand-up collar outlined with crystal pleating. Pearls and white bead sequins accented the chantilly lace bib and the full bishop sleeves. The empire waistline, banded in satin ribbon, fell softly to the full skirt and chapel-length train which was bordered with a wide flounce of crystal pleating. Delicately framing her face was a bridal tierra of lace and pearls which secured a lace-edged fingertip and blusher illusion veil.

Mrs. Larry Colson, the matron of honor, wore a red polyester velvet gown fashioned with long sleeves, full skirt and white lace trim. A matching headpiece with shoulder length veil and a marabou muff trimmed with evergreen and miniature red carnations completed her ensemble. Miss Donna Talbott and Miss Stephanie Coley, sister of the groom, were the bridesmaids. They wore royal blue gowns styled identically to that of the matron of honor.

Miss Deborah Boatright and Miss Miriam Boatright were the candlelighters. Miss Nicole Bohm was the flower girl. Michal Crawford was the ringbearer.

Timothy Pico served as the best man. Groomsmen were Jeffrey Coley, brother of the groom, and Steven White, brother of the bride. The Rev. Stephen Nulph and the Rev. Marc Strand seated the guests.

The reception was held at the Ramada Inn.

The groom's parents honored the couple with a rehearsal dinner Monday evening at the Old Missouri Homestead.

The bride graduated from Smith-Cotton High School in 1973 and received a business certificate from Bob Jones University, Greenville, S.C., in May, 1976. The groom is a senior at BJU and will graduate in May with a bachelor of science in the Bible.

The couple will be at home in Greenville.

Ogden-Dillon

WARRENSBURG — The United Methodist Church here formed the setting of the 1:30 p.m. Dec. 18 wedding of Mona Marie Ogden and Gary Lynn Dillon.

The Rev. Hubert Neth performed the double ring ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Pico, Knob Noster, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George N. Dillon, Knob Noster. Baskets of mums and blue and white satin balls decorated the altar as Michael Quimby, organist, accompanied Kathleen Callahan as she sang the wedding selections.

The bride wore an ivory heirloom-look organza gown with elbow-length puff sleeves trimmed with lace and crocheted blue flowers. Her shoulder-length veil was also organza. She carried a silk handkerchief which had been carried by four generations of the groom's family.

Mrs. Robbie Selbe was the matron of honor and Ronald P. Griggs was the best man.

Following the reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Jodoin, Knob Noster, the bride chose a red pantsuit for traveling to Table Rock Lake.

The groom is employed at Harmon Electronics, Inc.

The couple will be at home in Knob Noster.

Learn from old, prepare for new

By CYRENE DEAR

WASHINGTON — "Ring out the old, ring in the new" are the familiar Alfred Lord Tennyson words we hear at the beginning of every new year. In 1977 they have a true reality. The bicentennial is finished and the beginning of the nation's 300th anniversary is in embryonic form.

What did we learn from 1976? There were cries of liberty, patriotism, history and greatness. There were parades, speeches, flag wavings, costumes and reflections. There was a presidential election where tears were shed for the person defeated and for the victor. A Southern businessman, former governor, naval officer and peanut farmer won. The defeated President is retiring with dignity and the love of many friends.

As the bell tolls for President Ford's last days in the White House and a new bell rings for the inauguration of President Jimmy Carter, what does it mean to the nation? It means a new face in the White House speaking with a Southern accent. It means promises which no human being can possibly keep no matter how hard he tries. Jimmy Carter will try, but already there are divisions among many who worked so hard to elect him.

The campaign promises of politicians included reforms, improvements, limitations, expansions and many others, but when the actuality of running the government of the United States arrives, some old establishment faces, who know and are known to Washington, are reappearing. Some new and untried persons will come, dedicated, sincere and determined to create something new. They will accomplish a few changes, but only time will tell whether they will remain and flourish.

But as always the new year brings hope, and that is why we greet each other with "Happy New Year." This is good for persons who say it, for those who hear it and those who believe it.

The bicentennial souvenirs are sold at half price, but the ideas that were remembered and rehearsed will remain and be cherished, and 1977 will build anew upon what was good in the past.

50 years together

Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Tobaben celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Friday. Mr. Tobaben and the former Miss Opal Fowler were married Dec. 31, 1926 in Lawrence, Kan. The couple has two children, Jim Tobaben, Independence; Geraldine Hunter, Route 1; and three grandchildren.

Mackie designs beachwear to flatter

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK (NEA) — If the average American woman found herself face to face with the Good Fairy one day, outside of Robert Redford, what would she ask for?

Cole of California, the swimwear firm, thought about that and decided most of them would grab her by the wand and shout, "Cher! Make me look like Cher!"

So with a corporate smile on its lips, the company took Bob Mackie to lunch and said, look, we know you're responsible for Cher's wardrobes and that you're probably the most successful costume designer in televison.

You've won three Emmy Awards. You've been dressing every single person who appears on "The Carol Burnett Show," for the past 10 years. Like we said, you put Cher in sparklers and spangles, and between the two shows, you work seven days a week to provide costumes for roughly 35 people.

Then there are the cabaret wardrobes you create for Diana Ross, Gwen Verdon, Raquel Welch, Mitzi Gaynor, even Peggy Fleming.

Well, we don't think you have enough to do. We think it's time you tackled ready-to-wear and started relating to those lovely ladies out there who make it possible for us to take you to such a nice restaurant.

We'll make it worth your while, the company said, nudging Mackie with its corporate elbow. Why not design a line of swim-and-afterwear for us? Who knows but those lovely ladies out there may think by wearing it, they'll sort of resemble Cher?

"I would like to do other things," Mackie replied as they got down to dollars and cents.

Now, Mackie's Beach and Beyond collection for Cole of California is in the stores. It consists of maillots, bikinis, sarong and cutout swimsuits that begin at $29, and cover-ups — caftans, robes and playclothes — that stop around $90.

"It's doing very well," he reported during a recent visit to New York.

But he didn't rush, he took his time "trying to come up with the right stripes and the right kind of jersey — I wanted to get away from that sleazy look jersey can have."

And he found that there are similarities in designing for television and ready-to-wear. "The human body, for instance," he said, grinning.

"I deal with stars and their bodies aren't any better than anyone else's. Every once in a while you get a fabulous one like Cher who can wear any style, but otherwise they have the same problems every other woman has."

He wouldn't say who had what problems, but they include bow legs, long waists, short waists, thick thighs, "and behinds that are too big. And some stars look better in pantyhose at the beach."

You don't put a chubby woman in "white sequins" and if a dancer's legs are strongly developed, "I raise the leg line on the costume to make the legs look longer. I've done that in some of the bathing suits but not so the bottoms fall out.

"You see, my suits aren't just for people with fantastic bodies. I believe if you have something that doesn't look good, cover it up and show something else."

If you're a lady with a good figure "and maybe you've had a couple of children and you have a few stretch marks, you'd look good in a maillot. Bikinis, I think, are for a young body, which means age doesn't matter as long as the body is young."

But no matter what your body looks like, "I think it's silly to worry about it. Everybody should go to the beach. You know that first five minutes in a bathing suit is terrible for everyone."

Even Cher?

Jiedel set to undertake a new 'career'

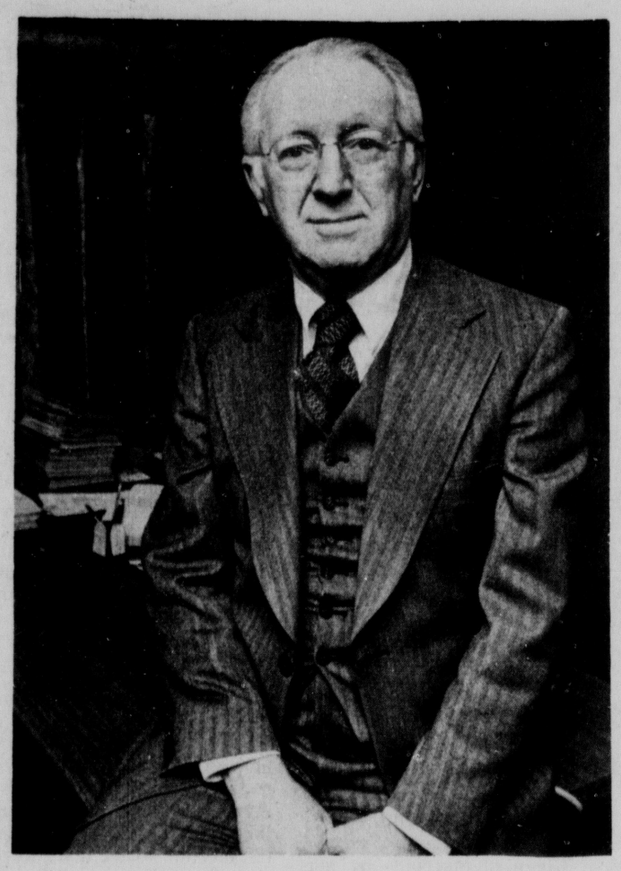
By RON JENNINGS
Staff Writer

Ray Jiedel, assistant administrator of Bothwell Hospital, is retiring. Now he can have the time to really get down to work.

Beginning Monday, Jiedel will enter the third stage of his 30-year love affair with the hospital. A women's clothing merchant when he was named to the hospital Board of Trustees in 1946, Jiedel served as the board's treasurer for nearly 20 years. Fulfilling a long-time ambition to retire in his mid-50's, Jiedel sold his shop in 1965 — just in time, it turned out, to disavow this early career pledge and join Bothwell only months later as purchasing agent and, later, assistant administrator.

Now, at age 68, he is the organizer and leader of the hospital's new planning and development committee and will continue to serve in a unique consulting capacity.

According to its official statement of purpose, this committee of local citizens will "determine in an orderly fashion the priorities needed for the expansion of existing hospital facilities, the development of new support areas as well as new procedures and services to be offered to the community..." The progress of this expansion program, it is duly noted, "will be determined to a great extent by the rapidity in which money can be raised..."



Ray Jiedel

In Jiedel's words, "we are thinking of next week as well as five and 15 and 25 years down the road. Just what are the needs of the hospital? How will these needs be met?"

Some immediate goals, as set by the Board of Trustees, are the establishment of a cobalt unit, the expansion of the nuclear medicine department, the enlargement of office space in order to create a more orderly flow for the admissions department, the creation of a new administrative section, enlarging the medical records department and the creation of classroom and meeting room space.

These projects, it is hoped, can be financed through private contributions from local physicians, businesses, industries and, Jiedel optimistically believes, "the community and surrounding area at large, which the hospital has served so well."

He also hopes that additional funds may come in the form of endowments, bequests, memorial gifts and private or governmental grants "that would not carry any strings which could not be handled very wisely."

Other goals, which it is hoped can be undertaken simultaneously with the other improvements, include a new kitchen, a new dining area, a new laundry, improved linen department and remodeling of the obstetrics department. These projects are scheduled to be financed through $600,000 in revenue bonds. The issuance of these bonds will not raise taxes or make the city liable for any debut incurred.

Longer-range goals include enlarged space for the hospital laboratory, inhalation therapy and physical therapy departments, automated computerized analyzer, enlarged heart-monitoring equipment, window modifications on the hospital's south side and modifications of the delivery suite.

As a consultant, Jiedel will largely be responsible for helping coordinate these plans and advising on priorities. On the more practical level, he will be working in public relations and it's logical outgrowth — fund-raising. Having already drawn up many details regarding the planning and development group's organization and purpose, Jiedel is now busy selecting between seven and nine local residents to serve on this committee to help him spearhead these activities.

"I couldn't work with too large a group," he said. "I want simply a nucleus of people I know I can count on."

The formation of this group will fulfill a long-held dream, he added, "because I have felt for some time that the public should be involved in the hospital in this development field...Bothwell is at this time a viable institution and a committee such as this will help it remain an institution of that nature for many years to come."

Jiedel's immediate goal is to secure enough funds to begin the top priority projects in two years. "We think this can be done," he explained. "Of course, we are counting on the help of a lot of people from all walks of life in Sedalia and the surrounding area. But we also have faith in them and that's why we feel very optimistic."

But, when it comes to hospital growth, Jiedel isn't only concerned with bricks and mortar.

"I also hope, eventually, to see this area of development and planning become a fully-integrated department of the hospital," he said. "I hope what we are starting this new year will succeed well enough to warrant the eventual establishment of this department on a full-time basis...We feel the design of this department should make it a permanent, on-going creative asset for the community as well as Bothwell."

Kissinger is next to the top in poll

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Henry Kissinger came in second behind West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. President Ford trailed Mao Tse-tung in fourth place, and President-elect Carter placed eighth behind Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Those were some of the results reported Thursday of a German television man-of-the-year survey. ZDE, the second national channel, said that 20 per cent of 2,000 viewers who responded chose Schmidt, 15 per cent picked Kissinger, and 14 per cent voted for Mao as the most important personality of 1976.

Kidney patients to marry

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Mike Leite and Robin Perry lost their hearts on the artificial kidney machine.

The couple, who met at the kidney dialysis ward of the University of Oregon Health Sciences Center where both got regular treatments, announced their engagement Thursday. They plan to marry in September. Both now take treatments at Good Samaritan Hospital.

Since 1974, both had been spending 24 hours a week attached to the machine, which fulfills the kidney's function of cleaning the blood.

Miss Perry, 22, was on the morning shift, and got off the machine at noon. Leite, 26, came on at 1 p.m. for his treatment.

They met when she ran late one day and he arrived early.

"This nurse at the hospital was always trying to set me up with people," said Leite, an administrative trainee at the U.S. Veterans Administration Hospital here. "One day she stuck a piece of paper with Robin's phone number in my pocket, and I gave her a call."

Last Valentine's Day, they went out for the first time.

The couple said they are in a better position to understand each others' problems because they both have to go through the process three times a week.

"If one of us feels bad after a run (a stint on the dialysis machine) the other can understand it better," Leite said. "We can relate to each other better."

They plan a week's honeymoon in Hawaii after their wedding, but will have to make arrangements to get the treatments while they are away.

Most of the $23,000 annual cost of treatments is paid for by Medicare. The rest is paid for by insurance and by the Kidney Association of Oregon, which operates on contributions.

Leite jogs regularly and says kidney patients can do almost anything other people can, except that "we might not be as strong as someone else."

Since Leite's condition is hereditary, the couple said they probably will adopt children.

Hard time for steamboats

CINCINNATI (AP) — Things just aren't rolling along for the Delta Queen Steamboat Co.

The company had high hopes earlier this year when it launched the Mississippi Queen, the first overnight steamboat built in America for 50 years.

She cost $23 million, and was promoted as having all the comforts of a inland cruise ship—swimming pool, movie theater and beauty salon.

But whatever techniques were needed to build a riverboat, the company failed to recapture them in the right proportions. She couldn't keep to her scheduled speed, and the only place she has been cruising since August is in a New Orleans drydock.

Company officials say they have had to spend "several million dollars" rebuilding the engine and restructuring the paddlewheel.

"It's a difficult thing putting an engine from 50 years ago into a new vessel. It becomes a complicated procedure," said Betty Blake, president of the Delta Queen company. "It's like putting old-fashioned heating in a new skyscraper. There are a lot of worlds that you have to meld together."

Just building the boat required a gamble, said Ms. Blake, who prefers that designation. Some materials used on riverboats 50 years ago aren't available and others had to be modified.

"On some of those parts we just didn't do the right thing," she admitted.

The boat was supposed to start regular service between Cincinnati and New Orleans last July, but it was in regular service for only a short time. Cancellations alone have resulted in a loss of revenue for the company of between $3 and $4 million, Ms. Blake said.

She said the Mississippi Queen will be back in service beginning March 5 with cruises from New Orleans to Natchez, Miss., for the rest of the year. But company officials want to take a good look at the vessel before sending her on a regular schedule on the Mississippi again.

The Mississippi Queen's woes have put a burden on the company's other source of revenue—the Delta Queen, built 50 years ago.

The Delta Queen ran into bad luck last month when she struck a freighter during a cruise from New Orleans to Natchez. But damage was minimal, no one was seriously injured, and, according to Ms. Blake, the Delta Queen has been able to continue her regular schedule of cruises.

$20,000 federal raise?

President Ford is expected to take action soon on the recent recommendation by an advisory commission calling for huge salary increases for top-level government officials. Although such officials may be entitled to a modest increase in pay, the recommended raises are so ridiculously out of line that the President, we're sure, will veto the plan. In the unlikely event that he approves it, or President-elect Carter revives the proposal when he takes office, Congress can — and should — block the pay hike.

Incredible as it would seem, the advisory commission has suggested an immediate pay raise of 50 per cent — or an average salary hike of just under $20,000 a year — for judges, Cabinet members and all career employes of the government above the level of GS-14, whose current salaries already range from $33,789 to $65,600. The commission even recommended that the President's salary of $200,000 be raised.

What is the rationale for proposing pay hikes that would be nearly twice as large as the average taxpayer earns in a year?

According to the commission, the pay of the government's top officials isn't on a par with comparable jobs in private industry, and they have only had one small salary increase (5 per cent) since 1969, while the cost of living has gone up nearly 50 per cent since then.

What the commission does not point out is that most of those officials received a 50 per cent pay hike in that year. It also overlooks the fact that they enjoy job security and fringe benefits — pensions, sick leaves and numerous other goodies — that private industry cannot and does not match.

Though the commission and those who would personally benefit by its recommendation would have us believe that most judges, Cabinet members and other ranking officials may soon pack up and leave government service if they don't get a 50 per cent raise, we simply don't believe it.

That sounds like a bluff — one which the President and-or Congress can safely call. (Boston Herald American)

Justices ratifying own ERA

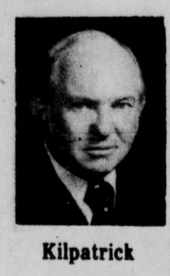
WASHINGTON — The sovereign states are not doing much these days for Equal Rights Amendment, but proponents of the amendment should be of good cheer. If they will only be patient, the Supreme Court effectively will ratify it for them anyhow.



Kilpatrick

With its decision of Dec. 20 in the Oklahoma beer case, the court struck one more blow for equal treatment of the sexes. It was a bum decision, violative of every principle of judicial restraint, but it does no great harm and may well do good.

Oklahomans will be miffed. Oklahoma is a fine state. I know; I was raised there. But Oklahoma is not without flaw. Thanks to the political clout of the Baptists and the bootleggers, working together in unholy coalition, it is to this day impossible to be served a gin martini before dinner at the Skirvin. One more effort at liquor by the drink went down the drain in November.

This same regrettable attitude may be observed in the matter of 3.2 beer, a thin libation that is the shame of every honest brewer. Subsequent to the repeal of Prohibition, Oklahoma authorized the sale of this stuff but proscribed its sale to "minors." The law defined a minor as a male under the age of 21 or a female under the age of 18.

Last year a thirsty youth by the name of Curtis Craig, being then under the age of 21, brought a federal suit for declaratory and injunctive relief. He complained that the age differential denied him equal protection of the law under the Fourteenth Amendment. He lost in the trial court, but by a 7-2 margin he won on appeal.

Speaking for the majority, Mr. Justice Brennan found no merit whatever in Oklahoma's case. The state contended that the law had been passed in the interest of highway safety. Statistics were introduced to prove that young males are more prone than young females to drink beer and to get arrested for drunk driving. Young males are killed or injured more often in highway accidents. For these reasons, the state argued, the age differential could be justified as a measure to make it more difficult for young bucks to buy beer and take to the road.

Mr. Justice Brennan found the figures unconvincing. To prove broad sociological propositions by statistics "is a dubious business." The relationship between sex and safety was "far too tenuous" to satisfy the law. The data provided "only a weak answer" to the paramount question of whether equal protection had been denied.

Having said all this, Mr. Justice Brennan struck down the law for "invidious discrimination." In the process, he enunciated a new rule by which these cases will be determined: To pass muster, "classifications by gender must serve important governmental objectives and must be substantially related to achievement of these objectives." Highway safety is an important objective, but a law permitting the sale of 3.2 beer to 18-year-old females while denying its sale to 20-year-old males is not substantially related to achieving it.

In a first-rate dissenting opinion, Mr. Justice Rehnquist hooted at the majority's reasoning. The new formula "apparently comes out of thin air." He could find no constitutional justification for it. On this point he was plainly right, for of course there was none. For the court to decide cases on what is "important," or "substantial," or "rational," or "compelling," said Mr. Justice Rehnquist, is to invite the judges to substitute their own preferences and prejudices for the decisions of a legislature. He sounded for all the world like the late Hugo Black.

Mr. Justice Rehnquist had the better view of the law, but Mr. Justice Brennan had the most votes. In constitutional construction, as in other rough-and-tumble exercises in democracy, votes count. The Oklahoma decision means that the states must provide overwhelming justification if they wish to enact distinctions at law by reason of sex. Otherwise, such laws will fall.

This is the aim of the Equal Rights Amendment. To become part of the Constitution, it must be ratified by 38 states. Thus far it has been approved by 34 states and by Justices Brennan, Marshall, Blackmun, White, Stewart, Powell and Stevens. That makes 41, and should suffice.

Bolivia's drug laws were made in U.S.

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of American youths spent the Christmas holidays in dismal, dingy Latin American prisons.

Most of them were arrested on drug charges, usually for possessing a few pinches of marijuana, but sometimes merely for attending a party where marijuana was smoked. Often the evidence against them was dubious.

The U.S. government has done little to get them out. What they may not know is that the U.S. government helped to put them in.

For Washington officialdom, in its zeal to halt the drug traffic from Latin America, brought pressure on various governments to crack down on drug violators. Unfortunately, the dragnets caught few smugglers but many users, including more than a few innocents.

We have written in the past about the plight of the young Americans who have received stiff sentences in Latin America for drug offenses that would have been excused in the United States. A couple of summers ago, our associate Joe Spear interviewed several of them in Mexican jails. Their arrests were the direct result of pressure from Washington.

Today, we turn the spotlight on Bolivia, whose harsh narcotics laws failed to distinguish between pushers and users until a few weeks ago. Thus a person caught with a gram of cocaine could be sentenced to 25 years in miserable Bolivian jails.

These tough, new narcotics laws were drafted in 1973 by a special Bolivian commission. The United States actually helped to pay the salaries of the Bolivian attorneys who were appointed to the commission. The United States also dispatched a Justice Department lawyer to Bolivia with a proposed narcotics code.

Thereafter, Bolivian and American narcotics agents worked closely together. This cooperation earned Bolivia some generous U.S. financial aid. The United States, for example, is planning to supply the Bolivian police with vehicles, telecommunications, contract advisers and investigative equipment.

The United States will also help train the police and will pay part of their operational costs. No less than Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, after meeting with the Bolivian leaders, urged U.S. support of the Bolivian narcotics campaign.

This campaign, meanwhile, has caught several American youths who swear they are guilty of no more than minor misdemeanors or are innocent altogether. The narcotics penalities were so harsh, according to our sources, that Bolivian judges have been unwilling to sentence the young Americans to long sentences.

Many Americans, therefore, are waiting in legal limbo for hearings. Several have joined in sending President-elect Jimmy Carter a poignant plea for help.

"We are presumed guilty until we prove ourselves innocent," they write. "Some people have not had a hearing in over a year. It seems that the Bolivian officials do not know what to do with us... We are all young ... some of us with children, and all of us with families we love and miss."

Sensitive sources inside Bolivia tell us, for example, that one 21-year-old woman has been in jail for six months. Yet she was detained on purely circumstantial grounds.

She had been invited to the hotel room of friends to listen to music. According to sources, the entire group was arrested 30 minutes later by Bolivian police, who found 40 grams of cocaine underneath a mattress. One man confessed that the cocaine belonged to himself alone. The entire group, nevertheless, has been jailed.

The young woman was sent to a prison-convent. Each day she is locked in an outside courtyard and then herded inside at night. The Bolivian government contributes 12 cents a day to her support; it takes a monthly check from her parents to feed her.

There are many similar stories, which don't make pleasant reading during the Christmas season.

Footnote: In fairness, it should be reported that the State Department has quietly urged Bolivia to soften its drug sentences. This quiet diplomacy was probably responsible for a revision of the law on Dec. 17.

SUGAR PLUMS: For the Democrats, the sugar plums will be dancing in their heads for another month. A thick, yellow volume, called the "plum book," identifies all the jobs waiting to be filled by President-elect Jimmy Carter after Jan. 20.

These jobs have been occupied by deserving, if defeated, Republicans for the past eight years. When Rep. William Widnall, R-N.J., lost his 1974 election, for example, the pain was softened by an appointment to the National Commission on Electronic Fund Transfers.

Ex-Rep. Henry P. Smith, R-N.Y., became chairman of the International Joint Commission on the U.S. and Canada. Ex-Rep. Larry Hogan, R-Md., was appointed to the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere. Another erstwhile congressman, John Dellenback, R-Ore., was named director of the Peace Corps, and a defeated senator, Gordon Allott, R-Colo., was appointed a consultant to the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Now they must make room for deserving Democrats.

Famous last words of 1976 recalled

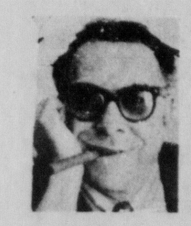
WASHINGTON—As with every year people said a lot of things in 1976 that they're sorry for. Here are possibly a few of them.



Buchwald

Aren't you glad you're not the person who said to Ronald Reagan, "If you want to win the Republican nomination you have to take Pennsylvania, and the only person who can do that for you is Sen. Richard Schweiker."

Or the advisor who said to President Gerald Ford, "They're all good men, but the only way to beat Jimmy Carter is to take Robert Dole as your running mate. You're a nice guy and you need a hatchet man."

Or the fellow who said to Sen. John Tunney, "You're not going to believe this, but guess who the Republicans are going to run against you—a 70-year-old English professor of Japanese ancestry named Hayakawa. Ha, ha, ha!"

And lest we forget the friend of Congressman Wayne Hayes who said, "Wayne, I'd like you to meet Elizabeth Ray-Elizabeth, I'd like you to meet Congressman Wayne Hayes."

Or the chap who said to Prince Bernhard, "Your Highness, I want to introduce you to a friend of mine from Lockheed Aircraft. He only wants a few minutes of your time."

Or the agriculture official who said to Secretary Earl Butz on an airplane, "Mr. Secretary, did you ever tell John Dean why the blacks don't vote Republican?"

And how about the public relations man attached to the Joint Chiefs of Staff who said to Gen. George Brown, "There's a newspaperman outside who wants to interview you about Israel. I think it would be good for your image."

Not to mention the campaign aide who said to Jimmy Carter, "When Playboy talks to you, be sure and tell them what's in your heart."

Or the man who said to Prime Minister Tanaka, "Mr. Prime Minister, I want to introduce you to a friend of mine from Lockheed Aircraft. He only wants a few minutes of your time."

And while we're at it let's not forget the three comrades of Madame Mao Tse-tung, who told her, "Once the old man croaks, we'll take over the country. Ha, ha, ha."

Or the military advisor to Gen. Idi Amin who told him, "The Israelis would never dare challenge the invincible armed military might of Uganda."

Or the assistant to Vice President Rockefeller who said, "There are some student hecklers outside. Why don't you show them with your finger what you think of them."

Or the diplomat who said to the French and British backers of the Concorde, "You just get the plane built and I'll take care of getting permission for it to land or take off."

Or the person who said to Italian Premier Rumor, "I want to introduce you to a friend of mine from Lockheed Aircraft. He only wants a few minutes of your time."

And, of course, the man (or was it a woman) who said, "Mr. Congressman, this is Tongsun Park. He'd like to help finance your election campaign."

As well as the producer who said to Harry Reasoner at ABC-TV, "Three guesses whom you're going to share the news with?"

Or the aide who told President Ford, "In the debates with Carter, don't forget to mention the Polish people."

And the ABC soundman who told his superiors during the first presidential debate, "We're all set to go."

And finally to end out the year, the sailor who said to the captain of the tanker "Argo Merchant" off Nantucket, "Aye aye, sir, we're right on course!"

Relative's book tries to dispel rumors about great songwriter

NEW YORK (NEA) — He was tormented enough when he was alive, and in the 33 years since his death, practically all they've done is perpetuate half truths and nasty gossip about him.

That's why Dorothy Hart wrote her handsomely illustrated book, "Thou Swell, Thou Witty," published by Harper & Row and subtitled, "The Life and Lyrics of Lorenz Hart."

People must know that her brother-in-law "wasn't born with a bottle of Scotch in his hand or spent 24 hours a day at the bar." That he wasn't a homosexual, as some say.

"Through the years," she said, shifting on the couch in her suite at the Hampshire House here, they've written "myths or distortions or just plain untruths. So I said, first I want to see his lyrics set down, and then I thought, I'll get some reminiscences of Larry's friends, to show him as he was."

Yes, Larry drank, but who doesn't in show business, especially in the '20s and '30s when there was no television and New York's theatrical life throbbed until dawn in Tony's or Reuben's?

"He didn't become an alcoholic until the latter years, the late '30s and early '40s. That's when the disappearances began, the blackouts and binges that led to drying-out periods in Doctors Hospital, when the depressions became more severe.

But if he'd been like that always, it would have been impossible for him to put those astonishing lyrics to Richard Rodgers' astonishing music.

Rodgers and Hart wouldn't have been able to say to a juvenile Broadway musical tradition, come on, where's your sophistication, your daring? Watch us; we're going to do the unheard of.

We'll integrate music and book, for instance, and we'll use a ballet sequence to advance the plot in "On Your Toes." We'll make a saloon heel the hero of "Pal Joey," and we'll write songs you won't be able to forget, hundreds of them, wistful and witty, simple and complex.

Larry Hart . . . at work on 'Pal Joey'

All you hear, though, is how difficult Larry was, undisciplined and disinclined to work. He was undisciplined, she says, "he was Peter Pan who never wanted to grow up but if he never seemed to be working, it was because it took so little effort.

"Oscar Hammerstein would sweat out lyrics for weeks, but Larry wrote a lyric in ten minutes," on scraps of paper, anywhere, everywhere.

And that Dick Rodgers has a fantastic capacity for work. Do you know that in 1926 alone they had five shows on Broadway? Often they did two a season.

"Today a man like Stephen Sondheim won't do a show except every three years."

And while Larry "liked to pace himself, Dick didn't understand that; he made no allowances" for Hart's temperament.

Still, they loved and respected each other and if there were occasional disagreements, it's a wonder that's all there were during their 23-year collaboration.

Unlike other lyricists, Hart never used a thesaurus or dictionary. The words came mostly because the music requested them and he had them all there in an extravagant vocabulary. He was always reading, often all night or what was left of it — Proust, Shakespeare, George Jean Nathan, who so tickled him "he called Teddy (his younger brother) and me to read us passages." He often shared his laughter, she says.

"He was a marvelous person, always laughing and talking, always smoking a cigar and rubbing his hands together when he was enthusiastic. He had great enthusiasms."

Because, you see, he considered himself grotesque. He was so short — under five feet — that he had to have his clothes tailor-made or face the humiliation of buying them in boys' departments.

That's why he drank, she says, not because he was homosexual. If anyone would have known about that, Teddy would. The brothers were so close, they shared a bedroom until she and Teddy married when Teddy was 40.

No, Larry drank because the women he loved rejected him, because he felt so ugly that when he'd catch sight of himself, "he'd turn away quickly, with a gesture of disgust."

But no one must know, they mustn't feel sorry for the tiny man who wore lifts but never discussed his height, and always laughed at the inevitable jokes.

Astrologer takes a look at Carter, economy, world in '77

By Bernice Bede Osol

(Editor's Note — Bernice Bede Osol, whose Astro-Graph and This Week in Astrology appear in more than 400 daily and Sunday newspapers, today looks at 1977, a year she feels will see many changes throughout the world. Because of the haste with which they come about, these changes will lack permanence, Bernice feels. Some of her previous predictions have been the nomination of Jimmy Carter and Jerry Ford, the deaths of Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai, the past recessionary trend, the illness and fall of Richard Nixon and the opening of relations with China.)

As America begins its third century as a nation, its people look hopefully to a new leader. Behind is a recent past filled with wars, civil strife and upheaval that rocked the foundations of our government. Jimmy Carter faces the task of keeping peace, while trying to gain prosperity. He must also maintain a strong stance with Russia and China while attempting to shore up our weakening allies. Astrology can furnish insights into how he may begin to cope with this monumental task in his initial year.

In a meteoric rise to national political prominence, Libran Jimmy Carter won the highest office in the land by a frail mandate. The President-elect is an enigma to many Americans and so he may remain, for although he will be the most publicized figure in the world, he is still a very private person. He is a man who asks the advice of many, but makes the decisions himself. He may not be as accessible as people thought he would be when he was campaigning as the folksy, down-home country boy. A person who arouses strong feelings in others, he will be loved or hated with very few emotions in between.

An idealist, but also a pragmatic individual, Jimmy Carter is highly desirous of making transformations he feels will be good for the country. Only history can bear out the wisdom of his choices. He will be sincere in his efforts to better economic conditions and to help the poor, though measurable success in this area may not come as quickly as his campaign promises predicted. If he is to attain his purposes, he must have strong, competent economic advisers at his side.

As president, Jimmy Carter will attempt to pay off the political debts that enabled him to gain the office. The payments may not come in the coin his debtors envisioned, however. His appointments to high level posts will show an interesting balance and in some instances Jimmy Carter may turn out to be more conservative than he first appeared. When he names a person to an important post, Jimmy Carter will have a tendency to continually look over his or her shoulder, although he maintains a low profile in doing so. There is never any question who pulls the strings. Although a supporter of labor, as president he will woo conservative elements as well, for as an astute politician he knows he must broaden his base of support.

In his approach to foreign affairs, the President elect is capable of an imaginative outlook. It is likely he will set up early summit meetings with the heads of other important world governments. He is a quick learner, a person highly conscious of details and already knowledgable in the use of politics domestically. He is a man who understands power and leverage and is not afraid to use them.

Toward the end of his first year, he is apt to become less tolerant of those who criticize him although a fair and just man he is not prone to forget slights readily.

THE ECONOMY

Some time ago I predicted that the administration in power in 1977 would look good because a change in the fiscal cycle of the United States would bring about a slight upturn in the economy. This will begin to happen in the first year of Jimmy Carter's term of office and would be more exciting if it were the start of a major trend. Unfortunately, it is not and more serious problems with foreign oil in 1978 as well as continuing inflation will head us for another recessional slide by 1980.

We can expect major transformations in government agencies, but efforts to curb bureaucratic expenditures are not likely to succeed this coming year. There is a slim possibility of an immediate tax break, although there could be some slight relief early next year. The Gross National Product will be up as we go into 1977, but not dramatically.

The days of super salaries for superstars are waning and luminaries in the glamor fields of sports and entertainment may see some trimming of their big paychecks in late 1977.

Getting people back to work will be afforded top priority by the Carter administration, but only small appreciable gains are apt to come in 1977. The employment picture could brighten further in 1978.

THE WORLD

Unstable is the word that best characterizes world conditions in the coming year. There is unrest within the borders and the ever-present danger of trouble from outside forces in places like the Mideast and Africa. There will be sudden shifts in power and policy and statesmen will have to be quick-witted to be able to guard their country's interests.

The star of the People's Republic of China is still ascending and Jimmy Carter's administration could further cement ties with that vast country by establishing full-scale diplomatic relations. An ambassador to Peking is now a possibility. There will be far more inner turmoil than is evident to those outside of China as the new rulers place greater stress on technology than political philosophy. China's needs for technical assistance and trade may be the magnet that draws her toward the United States.

The Great Bear of Russia will watch Jimmy Carter's dalliance with China closely before making overtures. She may even emit a few growls to test our reaction.

Israel must always be wary of the powder keg neighborhood of which she is a part, but will have her greatest tests internally in 1977. Fighting inflation will be no simple matter and new austerity could be the game plan by the beginning of 1978.

Iran experiencing the evils of modernization

By DICK KLEINER

TEHRAN, Iran (NEA) — It's probably apocryphal, but in Tehran they tell you, with a straight face, that a dozen years ago there were camels wandering up and down Pahlavi Street.

No more camels. In fact, Tehran is today so modern and up-to-date that the big problems are traffic and smog. It's gotten so bad that the Iranians are writing poetry about traffic and smog — and, in Iran, that means it's serious.

Tehran has the worst traffic jams you'll ever see. At intersections, the cars are always boxed in, because the Tehran drivers don't seem to care about what color the traffic light is. They just go, and pretty soon the intersection is a mess.

The city is ringed with brown mountains, but you have to peer through a dense cloud of smog to see them. The Iranians seem almost proud of their pollution problem, because it's a positive sign of progress — it means their capital is totally modern.

Being modern is a big thing with the Iranians. They want to be part of today's world, and that's the big reason they recently staged a whopper of a film festival.

The idea was, according to Hajir Daryoush, the festival's secretary general and guiding light, to show the world how modern Tehran is by inviting stars and film-makers from all over the world to the festival. After all, any nation that has a film festival must have gone beyond camels.

So there were movie people from the U.S., England, Italy, Germany, France — all over, even Australia and New Zealand. And, for a couple of weeks, they showed their films to a panel of judges representing most of the major film-making nations.

In between, Iranian films were shown, too, because part of being modern is having your own film industry. A film showing just that, the history of Iran's film industry, was the big event at the opening night festivities.

That was supposed to be "glittering." In fact, that adjective was used in all the local Tehran reports about it. But one nation's "glittering" is another nation's "ho-hum." Let me tell you about the glittering opening night of the Tehran Film Festival.

It was held in Roudaki Hall, Tehran's opera house. And it's a glittering building, all right — very new, great chandeliers, a royal box for the Shah and the Empress, all sorts of architectural pomp.

And everybody was there —the U.S. ambassador to Iran, ex-C.I.A. boss, Richard Helms. Tehran's society was there. The visiting stars and directors were there.

We were brought to the Hall from our various hotels by bus. It isn't often that you can get people like Otto Preminger in a bus. He had a few comments to make, of course, but he got on.

It took an hour to get to Roudaki Hall. It takes an hour to get from anywhere to anywhere else in Tehran. It's the traffic. You crawl, then stop. Then crawl some more. And we had a police escort.

We waited in the lobby for the ceremonies to begin. They served bottles of soda pop with straws in them. A waiter, in a business suit, passed trays of pastries. There were bowls of pistachio nuts, which are big in Iran.

Somebody noticed that in Iran, which is modern Persia, they didn't have Persian rugs but linoleum on the floor. The Shah wasn't there. The Empress was supposed to appear, but they said she had the flu and so wouldn't come.

Nobody recognized our stars. It's only lately that American films have begun to be shown in Iran. Sally Kellerman, shivering in her backless gown, tried to get a car to go back to the hotel, but there were no cars. Only the bus.

Hajir Daryoush, the secretary general of the festival, made a welcoming speech. He spoke, naturally, in Persian, the language of Iran. There was no translation. Then they showed the film about Iran's film industry. Some of the excerpts looked interesting. John Simon, the New York Magazine film critic, said he didn't like any of them.

Going back to the hotel, director Paul Mazursky muttered, "This whole city is one big Polish joke." That was when we were once again mired in traffic.

One night, a bunch of us had dinner together. Otto Preminger offered to treat us to caviar — Iranian caviar is justifiably famous — and drinks before dinner. He carefully explained to the waiter what he was paying for and that the dinner itself was to be separate checks.

But when the check came, everything was on Preminger's bill. He tore it up. It took an hour to straighten that out, and we almost had another oil embargo before it was done.

Preminger, like everybody, was also being careful about what he ate. We had been warned about the water, about fresh fruits and vegetables. Despite the warnings, Arthur Hill became ill. But the rest of us thrived. Preminger was careful not to have any ice in his vodka.

The local newspapers — there are two in English — were very aware of the festival, and wrote long articles about it. They called Sally Kellerman "Sally Keller." She laughed it off.

When Arthur Hill arrived, there was no hotel room for him. He had to sit in the lobby all night until a room was cleared at five in the morning. He said it was one of the most interesting nights he'd ever spent.

The big disappointment to me was the lack of Cadillacs. I suppose, like all Americans, I'd figured that oil-rich Iran would be swarming with Sevilles and Eldorados. I only saw two. Most of the people drive Paykans, a local product.

I didn't even see one oil well.

Cub Scout pack formed at apartments

A new Cub Scout pack, number 28, has been formed at the Sedalia Housing Authority following a meeting of about 25 interested parents and children Thursday night.

Mrs. Rayedean Dimmitt, tenant relations assistant, said 14 boys have signed up to participate in the two dens.

Five adults from the authority volunteered to act as leaders. They are Linda Goforth, Barbara Stewart, Deborah Gay, Stephen Boggs and Virgil Frazier. Ralph Soler, Whiteman Air Force Base, will be cubmaster for pack 28, Mrs. Dimmitt said.

Also present Thursday night were Wiley Tracy, Cub Scout field director from Jefferson City, and Dean Ertel, district representative from Sedalia.

The Open Door has Service Center volunteered to pay part of the cost of handbooks and leadership training, Mrs. Dimmitt said. However, uniforms and other scouting equipment are still needed and may be donated by calling Mrs. Dimmitt at 827-1400.

Regular den meetings will begin after completion of the leadership classes, Mrs. Dimmitt said.

MIAMI (AP) — Lou Saban, the new football coach of the University of Miami has named four assistants, including a former pro football subordinate who resigned from the Buffalo Bills.

Cavanaugh joined the Bills in 1972 and served under Saban, who quit the pro team last September. Cananaugh has 18 years experience in college coaching ranks.

Pitt thrashes Georgia, locks up No. 1

Tough day for Georgia

Georgia quarterback Ray Goff (top) gains 12 yards on a keeper as Pitt's Jeff Delaney (14) closes in for the tackle. This was one of the brighter moments for the Bulldogs, who were soundly defeated by Tony Dorsett and company in the Sugar Bowl. Dorsett (left) rambled for 67 yards on this play to finish the day with 202 yards, a new Sugar Bowl record. (UPI)

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Matt Cavanaugh's passes destroyed Georgia while the fifth-ranked Bulldogs keyed on Tony Dorsett, and top-rated Pittsburgh virtually locked up its first national college football championship in 39 years Saturday with a 27-3 victory in the Sugar Bowl.

Cavanaugh scored the first touchdown for the Cinderella Panthers on a six-yard run and then hooked up with Gordon Jones on a 59-yard strike.

Dorsett, who wound up with a Sugar Bowl-record 202 yards after only 65 in the first half, slashed 11 yards into the end zone just two minutes before the half for a shocking 21-0 bulge.

Meanwhile, a storming Pitt defense allowed the suddenly toothless Bulldogs only one completion in 13 first-half passes and a meager 66 yards in total offense in the first two periods.

The pilfering Panthers intercepted four passes in the second quarter, with thefts by linebackers Arnie Weatherington and Jim Cramer igniting touchdown drives of 74 and 67 yards.

Pitt's Eastern champions made it a brilliant and joyous New Year's Day farewell for Coach Johnny Majors, who rescued a rag-tag program four years ago and brought the Pathers to a spotless 12-0 mark and the top of the heap this season. It was Pitt's first perfect season since a 4-0 log in 1918.

Georgia's Southeastern Conference kings, a three-point underdog, wound up 10-2 but their heralded defense, nicknamed the "Junkyard Dogs," was embarrassed by the sharp-shooting Cavanaugh and a flock of surehanded receivers.

While Majors, coaching his last game at Pitt before returning to his Alma Mater, the University of Tennessee, completed four rags-to-riches seasons with a 33-13-1 record, the bullet-swift Dorsett added to statstics that should keep him college football's rushing king for a long, long time.

On 43 regular-season games, he netted 6,082 yards in becoming the first 6,000-yard runner in history. The yardage includes 1,948 this season, one of 19 NCAA records he holds or shares.

Saturday's yardage, along with 242 yards in two other bowl games, boosted his final over-all figures to 6,526 yards on 1,163 carries.

Bowl games are not included in NCAA statistics.

Houston whips Maryland

DALLAS (AP) — Sixth-ranked Houston stunned Maryland with three first period touchdowns on the blazing runs of Dyral Thomas and Alois Blackwell and then withstood a courageous Terrapin rally to whip the previously unbeaten, fourthranked Easterners 30-21 in the 41st annual Cotton Bowl.

The Cougars, co-champions of the Southwest Conference, thoroughly dominated Maryland and build up a 27-7 halftime lead before Terp quarterback Mark Manges set fire to his listless team in the numbing 29degree cold.

Houston, making its first appearance in the Cotton Bowl, controlled Maryland with incredible ease in a less than six-minute span of the first period as the Atlantic Coast Conference champions' 15-game winning streak was snapped.

With the smallest Cotton Bowl crowd in 30 years huddling in amazement, Thomas bolted 11 yards for a touchdown and Blackwell romped 33 yards for a second score and barged one yard for a third.

Manges dashed six yards for a second period touchdown, but Cougar quarterback Danny Davis answered with a 33-yard scoring pass to Don Bass.

Maryland, which finished 11-1, cashed two Houston fumbles into touchdowns in the second half.

Manges flipped an 11-yard scoring pass to freshman tight end Eric Sievers and Tim Wilson plunged a yard with 8:46 left to put the Terps within winning range.

However, Davis completed a crucial third-down pass and Lennard Coplin kicked a 28-yard field goal with 18 seconds left to ice the Terps.

The key play in Houston's final scoring drive that set up Coplin's field goal originated from the Houston 12-yard line on third and six. Davis faded back to pass, dodged a horde of Terp tacklers, and winged a 13-yard completion to Robert Lavergne to keep the vital drive alive.

Blackwell carved out a 149 yards in 22 rushes against the Terp defense, which was ranked sixth nationally against the rush. Thomas romped for 104 yard in 14 carries as Houston piled 320 yards overland.

Maryland, which was the second-ranked total defensive team in the country, had not allowed a touchdown on the ground in 22 quarters until Houston's first period blitz.

An estimated crowd of 58,500 watched and a Cotton Bowl official said it was the lowest attendance for a Cotton Bowl game since 1946.

Manges completed 17 of 32 passes for 179 yards as the Terps continuously drove up and down the field. Twice Maryland missed chip shot field goals and once drove 86 yards to the Houston one-yard line where the Terps had to surrender the ball on downs.

Maryland was seeking to post the school's unbeaten season.

Two big defensive plays by Houston defensive back Mark Mohr put the Cougars in position for two of their lightning first-period scores. Mohr blocked Mike Sochko's punt and recovered a fumble by Manges on his two big plays that earned him the most valuable defensive player of the game award.

Blackwell, the 5-11, 186-pounder from Cureo, Tex., was named the most valuable offensive player.

Stewart leads Kentucky to shutout win in Peach

ATLANTA (AP) — Slippery Rod Stewart, one of Kentucky's host of thoroughbred running backs, discovered a home away from home Friday in the Wildcats' 21-0 triumph over North Carolina in the Peach Bowl.

The sophomore fullback sparked Kentucky's first bowl appearance in 25 years by blasting out 104 yards in 19 carries and scoring three touchdowns in the ninth annual classic before a record crowd of 54,132. Stewart was selected offensive player of the game.

More than 30,000 in the crowd at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, which braved chilling winds and temperatures which dropped to 28 degrees by the end of the contest, were avid Kentucky rooters, who waved blue and white banners and cheered their Wildcats on with the chants of "Go Big Blue."

Kentucky used eight different running backs with freshman Randy Brooks gaining 66 yards, Chris Hill adding 55, Greg Woods 42 and quarterback Derrick Ramsey 30.

The defense forced five North Carolina turnovers. The first, a fumble by quarterback Matt Kupec, was converted into Stewart's one-yard touchdown run early in the third period after a scoreless half.

Stewart added scoring runs of 13 and threee yards as Kentucky dominated the second half.

Underdog Southern Cal gets by Michigan, 14-6

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Freshman running back Charles White took over for injured All-American Ricky Bell in the first quarter and led the underdog University of Southern California Trojans to a 14-6 victory over Michigan Saturday in the 63rd Rose Bowl game.

With the Big Ten co-champions leading 6-0, Southern California mounted its first touchdown drive in the second quarter. White carried 35 yards in eight runs in an 80-yard drive, capped by a one-yard run by senior quarterback Vince Evans.

In the fourth quarter, White ran seven yards for a touchdown, capping a 58-yard march.

Playing before a crowd of 106,182 and a national television audience, the Wolverines scored first on a 50-yard advance in 12 running plays with All-American Rob Lytle scoring from the one. Southern California's Walt Underwood blocked Bob Wood's conversion attempt.

Jerry Zuver, who usually holds for the placements, had been injured during the scoreless first quarter. Curt Stephenson came in as the alternate holder, but it appeared that it was Stephenson's supreme lunging effort that made the play—not an breakdown on the part of the holder.

Bell, runner-up in the Heisman Trophy balloting, was knocked out in first quarter and doctors advised against using him the rest of the game. White, who had taken over for one game when Bell was hurt in the regular season, gained 114 yards in 32 carries.

Michigan, which led the nation in scoring during the regular season with 38.7 points per game, proved unable to mount a passing attack. Meanwhile, Evans hit 14 of 20 for Southern Cal totalling 181 yards.

Shelton Diggs, who caught the winning conversion in the Rose Bowl two years ago when the Trojans edged Ohio State 18-17, caught eight of the throws for 98 yards.

No. 2 Michigan entered the game favored by a touchdown over the No. 3 ranked Trojans, but Pittsburgh's 27-3 triumph over Georgia virtually eliminated the Rose Bowl as a decider of the national championship.

Evans, a senior from Greensboro, N.C., won honors as player of the game. Plaudits also went to the stout Southern Cal defense, where junior linebacker Clay Matthews called the signals that held down the option offense of the visiting midwesterns.

Rockne's grandson has sights set on being Irish head coach

MURRAY, Ky. (AP) — John Rockne has one driving ambition in life and he's willing to devote the next 20 years at hard labor to achieve it.

He wants to be head football coach at Notre Dame, where his grandfather created a legend and enhanced interest in the sport four decades ago.

Rockne, 27, now a graduate assistant football coach at Murray State University, acknowledges his chances of becoming head coach at Notre Dame aren't that good. In fact, he admits, they're not good at all. But that's not going to slow him down, Rockne vows.

"I want to be head coach at the University of Notre Dame within 20 years, at least," he said in an interview. "I don't know why. I've given that a lot of thought. I guess it's to see if I could cut the mustard."

He realizes that he'll have to become a head coach elsewhere before going to Notre Dame, where he tried unsuccessfully to get a job similar to the one he has now at Murray.

"I'll have to be somewhere where I could move to Notre Dame, like Southern Cal or Purdue or Michigan as an assistant, and that's eventually what I plan to do," he said.

"I'm willing to pursue this for the next 20 years, and everything I do is geared to that. Everything I learn here will help me get there."

The Rockne family still lives in South Bend, Ind., and John grew up there in the shadow of his grandfather. As a child, it bothered him, but when he became older he didn't mind when "people pointed a finger at me and said I was Knute Rockne's grandson."

He likens his ambition to a mountain that he wants "to climb."

"It's just something I grew up with. He died 19 or 20 years before I was born but that's where he coached. I guess you could call him my idol," Rockne said. "I believe in what he did, his over-all philosophy. It's just a game, you play to have fun."

But the young Rockne says he gets emotional when he listens to recordings of his grandfather's famous halftime pep talks.

"I've been listening to them since I was a little kid," he said. "My grandmother and my father had them, and I think we still have them."

Rockne has seven younger brothers, and none has expressed a desire to coach at Notre Dame.

"But I'm sure everyone in our family wants that, has that ambition, but they haven't said it out loud," Rockne said.

If he ever achieves his dream, he won't do everything like his grandfather did.

"I don't think the pep talks are relevant to the kids today," he said. "Football is very emotional, and sometimes it comes forth. But you can't go out and motivate a team in toto by giving them a little speech. I think preparation is more important."

Young Rockne said he's going to coach at Murray one more season, then get his master's degree in physical education and go job hunting. He said he thinks it's too early to try for anything at Notre Dame, however.

Rockne says he doesn't want to be a head coach in high school, although that would, he admits, be his logical next step.

"I'd like to go to a smaller school as head coach, then a bigger school as an assistant," he said. "Then one day maybe, Notre Dame.

"But I'm not ready even to think about it right now," he said. "There's too much I have to learn."

Rockne was in charge of coaching wide receivers at Murray this past season and also scouted future opponents.

He said he doesn't think the fact that his name is Rockne will help him achieve his goal, and he doesn't want it to. He wants to make it on his own.

Tech TD

Texas Tech halfback Billy Taylor (33) shows his jubilation after scoring a second-quarter touchdown on an 11-yard run in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston. The Red Raiders' joy turned to sorrow after Nebraska rallied for a 27-24 victory.

'Huskers, Ferragamo cap season with win

HOUSTON (AP) — Talkative quarterback Vince Ferragamo, silent running back Richard Berns and a corps of big-play artists helped 13th ranked Nebraska erase some sad memories with a 27-24 Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl victory over Texas Tech.

"This game followed the same line of some of the others we lost this year," Ferragamo said after he twice capitalized on big plays by teammates to pull the Cornhuskers from 10-point deficits to victory Friday night.

"That's why it feels so good to win one like this now," Ferragamo added, speaking of the frustration he and his mates had felt through an up and down 9-3-1 season.

"This team played with all kinds of adversity. Unfortunately, We had a couple of bad plays (in the regular season) or we'd be No. 1 right now. It's great to go out like this."

After being ranked No. 1 in the nation in the pre-season, the Cornhuskers watched the big play become their enemy, losing to Missouri on a desperation 98-yard touchdown passrun play and then falling to Oklahoma in the final 38 seconds.

The loss to the Sooners dropped the Cornhuskers out of the Orange Bowl and made them wonder what they'd have to do to get the big plays working for them.

They found out against the Raiders, beginning in the second quarter. Trailing 17-7, Nebraska got its first break when Raider defensive end Harold Buell received a 15-yard penalty for spiking the ball after nrrowly missing an interception.

That kept a Cornhusker drive alive and allowed Nebraska to go in with a 17-14 halftime deficit. A 49-yard halfback pass and partially blocked punt set up the winning 14-yard surge.

"It's going to be great for our recruiting," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said after winning his third bowl game in four appearances. "It's been a tough year for our seniors and our coaches, but this win will give us momentum to go into next season."

Berns, a sophomore from Wichita Falls, Tex., was thrust into the starting tailback position when Monte Anthony suffered a season-ending wrist injury.

Berns, shy and unaccustomed to the limelight, responded with 118 yards on 27 carries against the Red Raiders.

Tech quarterback Rodney Allison, earned the game's Most Valuable Back honor after rushing 89 yards on 14 carries and hitting 15 of 23 passes for 193 yards and two touchdowns.

The award was little consolation. "I'd rather have won the game," he said.

Saints to meet payroll

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Even though prophets of doom have been heralding the impending demise of the Minnesota Fighting Saints for some time, players for the World Hockey Association team don't appear to be worried.

Saints' President Bob Brown announced Friday that the club payroll would be met, and told players they could get their checks immediately, even though payday wasn't officially until Monday.

Only two players stopped at the office for their checks.

Brown said owner Nick Mileti was making the $123,000 payroll for the two-week period and said the Saints would continue to operate on a regular basis.

"We considered several options and the one that was most obvious was the one that was overlooked. That was simply to make the payroll ourselves, which we did."

Brown said the Saints planned to continue meeting payrolls, but club owners were continuing their search for local investors.

A Saints' spokesman said club officials have said all along that they are not, and never have been in financial trouble.

"When the team moved from Cleveland to St. Paul last August, owner Nick Mileti made it clear that he had no interest in being an absentee owner," said Lee Meade, the club's director of marketing and public relations.

Mileti, who lives in Cleveland, believes a St. Paul hockey team should be owned by St. Paul people, and moved the team from Cleveland at the invitation of the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce and business community with the idea that it would be sold to local people, Meade added.

"There has never been any plan to fold the team, this would only happen as a last resort," Meade added.

Flames, Rangers jumping the gun

By The Associated Press

The Atlanta Flames and New York Rangers are holding the National Hockey League playoffs a few months early.

At least that's the way it seems to Flames' goalie Phil Myre.

"It was like a playoff game," Myre said Friday night after helping the Flames beat the Rangers 4-2 in an intense hockey match before a roaring crowd of 17,500 at Madison Square Garden.

Actually, it was nearly as important. The Rangers and Flames are fighting it out for the last playoff spot in the Patrick Division and Friday night's victory gave Atlanta a three-point lead in their hot race.

Tim Lysiak's 20-foot goal with less than seven minutes to play snapped a 2-2 tie and sent the Flames on their way.

In other NHL games, the Detroit Red Wings posted a 4-2 victory over the Cleveland Barons and the Chicago Black Hawks and Colorado Rockies skated to a 2-2 tie.

Wayne Dillon gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead on assists from Steve Vickers and Rod Gilbert. Bill Clement of the Flames tied the game at 8:06 of the second period when he scored a shorthanded breakaway goal.

Rookie defenseman Mike McEwen gave the Rangers a 2-1 lead early in the third period when his 55-foot slap shot trickled past Myre. But Simpson tied the game for the Flames halfway through the final period as he batted a rebound past Gratton.

Red Wings 4, Barons 2

Walt McKechnie scored one goal and assisted on two others as Detroit beat Cleveland.

The Wings broke in front when Nick Libett scored the only goal of the first period. Then Dennis Hextall and Dennis Polonich scored on rebounds during a 20-shot, second-period barrage to give Detroit a 3-0 edge going into the final period.

Black Hawks 2, Rockies 2

Wilf Paiement's goal with 1:27 remaining in the game lifted Colorado into a tie with Chicago. Paiement took a pass from Dave Hudson near the blue line and swept by a Chicago defender before pushing the puck past goalie Tony Esposito to cap Colorado's rally from a two-goal deficit.

Wake Forest over Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Forward Jerry Schellenberg scored a career high 32 points and led seventh-ranked Wake Forest past Richmond 84-73 Saturday in a nonconference basketball game.

Wake Forest, playing without leading scorer Rod Griffin, who is injured, trailed by as many as 10 points in the first half and was down by four at intermission.

The Deacons went ahead to stay on Skip Brown's jumper with 13:36 remaining but held only a six-point lead at 72-66 with four minutes left. Wake Forest then outscored the Spiders 8-3 over the next three minutes to increase their lead to 13 and clinch their ninth victory in 10 starts.

Oilmen see new year as an uncertain one

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Oilmen say 1976 has been a year of contrasts and uncertainty and they anticipate 1977 will be quite similar.

Lagging domestic production and spiraling imports highlight the contrasts.

The new Congress and new administration in Washington underscore the uncertainty.

For the consumer, one thing appears certain. Prices will continue to climb.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) boosted crude oil prices in mid-December as the Ford administration studied the advisability of proposing, before leaving office, that gasoline prices be decontrolled.

Oilmen, meanwhile, awaited clues that might indicate the direction and emphasis President-elect Jimmy Carter will place on energy matters.

Clifton C. Garvin Jr., board chairmn of the giant Exxon Corp., viewed the late December uncertainty this way:

"I can't read what the Congress is going to do in the new session...I very candidly don't know Governor Carter's views."

Some congressmen, however, already were drafting resolutions that would block any late move by the Ford administration to decontrol gasoline. Decontrol could open the way for free market price hikes of six to eight cents a gallon as opposed to a pass-through of only one to two cents because of the OPEC boost.

Natural gas prices also are expected to increase.

Although facing consumer group court challenges, the Federal Power Commission, seeking new supplies for interstate markets, boosted the price for new 1975-1976 gas from 52 cents to $1.42 per 1,000 cubic feet.

And oilmen are hopeful a 1976 near-miss for congressional decontrol of natural gas prices will become a reality in 1977. The Senate voted to decontrol prices for new gas dedicated to interstate markets but the House rejected a similar measure, 205-201.

Industry leaders plan to revive the issue early in the new session but acknowledge quick success probably would require a strong endorsement from Carter.

At the same time, the industry anticipates renewed congressional attempts to break up major oil companies.

They were encouraged by the outcome of 1976 public hearings on vertical divestiture proposals that would have separated the producing and marketing segments of the industry, but have particular fear of possible 1977 horizontal divestiture efforts that would prevent oil companies from operating in other energy fields such as coal.

Meanwhile, the industry was preparing to start production from Alaska's prolific Prudhoe Bay region and begin oil and gas explorations off the Atlantic Coast.

The scheduled mid-1977 opening of the Trans-Alaska pipeline will, for the first time, provide a market outlet for the vast North Slope crude oil reserves discovered in 1968.

Natural gas production from the area, however, remains years away. Federal approval of a gas pipeline route is not expected for months. At yearend, a FPC staff report suggested a line across Canada into the Midwest.

The Trans-Alaska pipeline is scheduled to be moving 1.2 million barrels of crude a day by the end of 1977 or early 1978.

West Coast refineries do not now need such quantities, however, and California is objecting to a proposed pipeline that would connect with lines serving the Gulf Coast and Midwest.

Tanker shipments to the Gulf and East coasts are being planned but the Federal Energy Administration has frowned on suggestions for a temporary swapout arrangement that would divert some Alaskan crude to Japan.

Foreign oil met more than 40 per cent of the nation's requirements as domestic crude oil production declined for a sixth consecutive year in 1976 and demand for petroleum products approached the record pre-embargo level of 1973.

Crude production averaged about 8.15 million barrels a day, compared with 8.362 million in 1975 and the all-time high of 9.637 million barrels daily in 1970.

The production decline continued despite a 14-year high for drilling activity that saw the industry complete 29,431 oil, gas and dry wells the first 10 months of the year compared with 25,729 the comparable year earlier period.

Oil imports soared more than 15 per cent to average about 7 million barrels a day compared with the pre-embargo level of 6.256 million in 1973 and only 3.419 million in 1970.

The FEA estimated the 1976 expenditure for foreign oil at $34 billion, compared with $3 billion in 1970.

Increased Alaskan production will offset some of the domestic decline and replace some imported oil, but industry sources say such trends will be only for the short term because of anticipated increases in demand.

Domestic demand in 1976 was expected to average about 16.847 million barrels a day, compared with 16.294 million in 1975 and the all-time high of 17.308 million in 1973.

Preliminary estimates for 1977 have run as high as 17.9 million barrels a day, "back to the pre-embargo pattern," according to Exxon's Garvin.

PLYMOUTH VOLARE 4-DOOR WAGON.
BIG ON ROOM... SMALL IN PRICE.

$3941*
AMERICA'S NO.1 SELLING WAGON
There are a lot of reasons Volaré Wagon is so big these days. First there's the room. It has more cargo room than any other compact wagon built in America. Volaré even has 85% the load capacity of the average of mid-size wagons.
And speaking of additional room, you'll appreciate Volare's locking optional interior side storage bins. They handle some of the extra gear you never seem to have room for.
24 MPG HWY 17 MPG CITY
EPA estimates †
Secondly, Volaré Wagon is economical. It got 24 mpg on the highway, 17 in the city with its 225 six 2-bbl. engine and manual transmission.
And to top it all off, Volaré Wagon has the best resale value in its class.‡
Wrap all that room and economy together with Volare's nice price, and you've got yourself quite a deal. Stop in and see Volaré Wagon soon.
Plymouth
AUTHORIZED DEALER PAA
*Manufacturer's suggested retail price excluding taxes, destination charges, and optional whitewalls ($39.25) and body side moldings ($38.40).
†Your actual mileage may differ depending on how and where you drive, the condition of your car and its optional equipment.
‡Volaré returned a greater percentage of original sticker price based on Automotive Market Report averages, 10-18-76, for comparably equipped cars.

Opening lead — Ace ♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

South ruffs the club lead and runs off all his trumps. East has to make five discards. Two clubs, one heart and one diamond are easy. The last one is likely to be about as painful as losing a tooth.

West had no problems. His hand can't possibly take a trick. Nevertheless, it is up to West to discard in such a manner as to solve East's problem for him.

Can he do this? Yes, he can!

He follows to three trumps and notes that East discarded on the third one. Hence, South is going to play four more trumps and West can make his four discards in such manner as to tell his partner the exact distribution.

West starts by discarding the deuce of hearts. His next discard is the three spot. Then he plays the four and chucks one of his useless high clubs on the last trump.

At this point, if East has been paying attention East will know that West started with exactly three hearts.

That leaves three hearts for declarer. East knows they are the ace, king and nine. East hangs on to the queen-jack-ten and stops the grand slam.

Ask the Jacobys

An Oklahoma reader wants to know what a "Pianola" is.

A pianola hand is one that presents no problems at all in the play. In other words, it practically plays itself just as the pianola, or player piano, would play itself once a roll was placed in it.

Make the best of life today

Dear Readers: HAPPY NEW YEAR!

How did you feel when you got up Saturday morning? Hung over? Depressed? Disgusted with yourself? Did your mouth taste like the bottom of a bird cage? Were you trying to read the paper through bloodshot eyes?

Serves you right. You should have quit when you were ahead. You were ahead, of course, just before you started.

Not everyone admires total abstinence, however. One fellow expressed sympathy for the bluenoses when he said, "it must be horrible to get up in the morning and know that's as good you're going to feel all day."

But here's a word of encouragement. You'll live. Time is your friend. By nightfall you knew you were going to make it. As I was saying, "Happy New Year!" And now a few cheerful thoughts to help get you through the next few hours.

Your car has just depreciated $640. Everything in your closet is last year's.

The resolutions for 1976 — all those promises you made to yourself — to lose weight, quit smoking, get organized, talk nicer to your mother-in-law, walk at least a mile a day, save SOMETHING out of each paycheck — they never materialized. But 1977 is going to be different. You're going to get places on time, clean out those drawers, catch up on all that back reading, write those letters, and acknowledge every Christmas card with a hand-written message.

So Happy New Year, everybody! Yesterday was not only the beginning of a new year, it was the first day of the rest of your life. So make it count. Savor it! Relish it! It's precious! You'll never get a chance to pass this way again.

Dear Ann Landers: I am only a teenager but I have something to say to that person who complained about long-winded telephone talkers. She signed her letter, "Callused On My Ear."

Doesn't she realize that just listening to a person can be a big help? Even if you don't say anything but "Yes. Of course, oh, sure. You bet. You don't say so?" Many times I've heard my mom spend nearly an hour on the phone and not say any more than that. One day I asked her why she let a certain gabby old lady talk her ears off. Mom said, "That woman needs somebody to listen to her. She is very lonely. She needs to know that somebody cares. Listening to her puts me behind in my work, but it's worth it."

I learned a lot about living that day, and now that I'm older, I know what Mom was talking about. Maybe if you print my letter it might educate somebody who doesn't have a mother who understands people as well as mine did. — Little T. From Tarrytown

Dear Little T.: Here's your letter and my thanks for writing it. What it boils down to is sacrificing a little time to be kind. What a wonderful way to start a new year.

CONFIDENTIAL to Capsulize It For Me Sweetie: Eat less. Drink less. Walk more. Give more. Stop worrying about things you can't control. Resist the temptation to "get even." Love the child who is least lovable. He is the one who needs it most.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR JO ANN YORK,
author of How I Feed My Family on $16 a Week

I've heard of your book and think it's nonsense. In these inflationary days, how can anyone feed four on $16 a week?—J.M., Racine, Wis.

● It can be done. Here are just a few ways I do it. I look for foods whose prices are going down. I stick to seasonal foods (for salads, lettuce in summer, cabbage in winter). I cook everything myself, in exact amounts. I often wonder how much of a family's food bill goes down the drain because Mom cooks too much and throws away what's left. I also believe in growing what you can—many vegetables thrive in a small space. Cut out nibbling items and your bills will go down even more.

FOR RICH LITTLE, impressionist

Has anyone ever complained about your impersonations? —J.R., Troy, N.Y.

● Yes. Tony Randall. He says I miss him completely. But then with Tony you can never be sure. I don't know if he's serious or putting me on.

FOR HELEN GURLEY BROWN, Editor of Cosmopolitan

When will you have your next male centerfold?—Mary Lee Chapman, Gainesville, Fla.

● When we get the right one to photograph. Not everyone is a Burt Reynolds. I want a man who is famous as well as highly attractive. When I find him,we'll keep to the same pose—we won't show complete nudity.

FOR JESSE OWENS, Olympic great

Is it true that you used to defeat racehorses in 100-meter runs?—Michael Banks, Watertown, Mass.

● Yes. I was able to win because of the horse's reaction to the starter's gun. When the gun went off, the horse would rear back. By the time he started running, I would be 50 yards down the track. He would then cover 21 feet for every seven feet I covered, but in a 100-meter race he didn't have enough time to catch up. In a 200-meter race, he would have won easily.

FOR MARLO THOMAS, actress

Can you remember what you did with your first big windfall?—S.A., Athens, Ga.

● I'll never forget. I blew the whole thing decorating my room. As a child, I was always fixing it up or trying to improve on my mom's taste. I liked buying posters or those funny little animals with holes in their backs for plants. I had cages with hamsters and all kinds of strange and exotic things. My room was a world of its own, and I loved being there. So through the years any time I've had some extra cash, I've gotten something for it.

FOR JUDY NORTON, star of The Waltons

I was surprised to see you and your husband on TV recently because I had no idea you were married. Tell me about him.—Tracie Heikkila, Hillsborough, Calif.

● When we got married in April, I was 18 and Doug was 27. We'd known each other for four years. We had a real, old-fashioned wedding. I wore a long, white, high-necked, long-sleeved gown with train and veil. I don't believe in marrying young, unless both are mature, which we were. Marriage is for keeps. Doug is a singing waiter who wants to get started in music.

FOR VIDAL SASSOON, hair stylist

Do you cater only to celebrities? And what would it cost to get prettied up at your salon?—Mrs. W. H. Rainier, Kennewick, Va.

● From the start we've believed in mixing our clientele. Duchesses and secretaries have sat side by side awaiting their turn. VIPs do frequent our salons, but the majority of our customers have modest incomes. Shampoo, cut and blow dry cost approximately $25, and you'll need a cut every six or seven weeks to keep your hair in shape and in style.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I read somewhere that John Lennon was at the new Copacabana in New York. Does this mean he's working as a single act?—Bob Benniman, Los Angeles, Calif.

● No, he was there as an invited guest at the reopening of the Copa (the famed night spot of yesteryear where all the big names appeared), now a discothèque. When a FAMILY WEEKLY reporter asked Lennon whether The Beatles might get back together, he explained why there wasn't a chance: "It would take at least six months of continual rehearsing; there's no way we could do that."

FOR MICKEY ROONEY

What ever happened to you? —B.J., High Point, N.C.

● I don't know—what ever happened to you? I'm still very much around and still am offered many movie parts. I just don't always accept them. My last one, Pete's Dragon, was for Disney Studios and will be released this year. Before that I did Domino Principle, out this spring. I'm also about to star in a new Norman Lear series, A Year at the Top, and I'll be doing live stage shows, including Las Vegas. Thanks for asking.

PRO AND CON

Should Juvenile Offenders Who Commit Crimes of Violence Be Tried As Adults?

Many believe that juvenile criminals—those under 18—are now America's most serious law-and-order problem.

PRO Dr. Thomas Szasz, psychiatrist, professor at Syracuse University and author of Law, Liberty and Psychiatry and numerous other books on law.

Juvenile offenders should be tried exactly in the same way as adults. Anyone who is capable of committing a violent crime is capable of standing trial for it. Our peculiar system of juvenile courts doesn't recognize the fact that these "kids" are the most dangerous people in the world. Because of juvenile crime, there is no freedom in America now, especially for the elderly in our big cities. The police should be ordered to shoot juveniles caught in the act of harming someone.

CON Karl Menninger, Director, Menninger Institute, Topeka, Ka., author of numerous books including Man Against Himself and The Crime of Punishment.

Children who escape into crime from cruel parents and cruel circumstances land right in the clutches of other criminals, the police or the predatory child-care institutions. This prospect is bleak enough—few children sentenced under our juvenile court system ever manage decent futures. But if you treat these children like adults, you are robbing them of the few legal rights and protection they have. They will never be treated civilly again, and they will react with vengeance.

THE SECRET WORD IS STILL GROUCHO

His outrageous life has been one slapstick comedy routine after another. At 86, he's going strong—and so is the Groucho revival

By Carol Botwin

Groucho Marx comes into his living room in Beverly Hills. At 86, the bandy-legged brash stride is a painfully slow shuffle. He is wearing plaid trousers, wide suspenders and an orange turtleneck sweater. A scarlet heart, like a red badge of courage, hangs from a chain at his throat. Also on a chain, glistening against the turtleneck, is an inscription in gold: "The secret word is Groucho." But gone is the famous cigar—banished by doctors. Gone, too, is the staccato, defiant delivery as he speaks. The tone is hoarse as Groucho greets me.

Nevertheless, once we settle down on his blue-and-white couch opposite a huge fireplace from which a wooden monkey clutching a cigar dangles, I discover that the feet may be slow, but the repartee is as fast as ever. For example:

Q. Groucho, you were known to use comedy in your private life as much as your public one. . . . Didn't anybody ever say to you, "Come on, Groucho, be serious for a change?"

A. How much change?

Q. Groucho, to set the record straight...

A. It's a lie!

Q. Who was the funniest man you ever knew in your whole life?

A. My mother.

Q. Who was the woman you admired most?

A. My father.

Q. Is it true that once, as a little boy, you stole a toy printing press from a department store and were barred from the store forever?

A. Yes, but once I got rich the store forgot the ban. Its doors are open to anyone with money. Not a lot of money. It has cheap things in there, too. Like me.

Ms. Botwin has written articles for several national magazines including Family Circle and The New York Times Magazine and has been an editor at Pageant, This Week, and American Girl.

Groucho, Chico and Harpo are entertaining more people than ever. Theaters show their movies, books are published about them, Marx Brothers posters are snapped up by teen-agers and kids flick ashes from imaginary cigars.

Groucho and costar Margaret Dumont

Q. I understand you are teaching yourself to play the piano. Are you a one-handed player?

A. I use three hands. Would you like to hear a tune?

With that, Groucho goes to the piano and plays. He follows his performance by singing the words to the song he has just played, "Everybody Works in My House but My Old Man," a great favorite of the 1920's.

The fact is, everybody did work in Groucho's house but his old man, which may be the reason this song is still one of his favorites. Raised in New York City's Yorkville section, Groucho (Julius) and his four brothers—Chico (Leonard), Harpo (Arthur), Gummo (Milton), Zeppo (Herbert)—were the sons of Sam Marx, a tailor famous for the cut of his suits—they never fit. It was Minnie Marx, a blonde pre-World War I bombshell, who did something about her family's poverty.

Inspired by her brother Al Shean, of the famous vaudeville team Gallagher and Shean, Minnie formed a vaudeville singing group made up of Groucho, Gummo and a female singer who was soon replaced by Harpo. Minnie bludgeoned the theatrical agents into giving her sons bookings and gradually added Chico and Zeppo to the act.

The boys toured the third-rate vaudeville circuit, passing through an endless succession of dusty rooming houses and small towns, trying to keep one step ahead of shady managers. They weren't doing badly as singers until adolescence struck. When their voices cracked, they became, through necessity, a comedy act.

Very few people know it, but Jack Benny almost became a Marx Brother. "We met him on tour," says Groucho, "and asked him to join our act, but his mother wouldn't let him."

The peak of the Marx Brothers' career came in Hollywood, where they were immortalized on film. They also pulled one of their most famous capers there: they cured producer Irving Thalberg's penchant for lateness by taking off all their clothes and roasting potatoes over an open fire in his office while they waited for him.

By this time, Gummo had left the act, and shortly afterwards Zeppo, too, decided that the life of a performer wasn't for him. Both Zeppo and Gummo now live in retirement in Palm Springs.

Chico was the first of the Marx Brothers to die, and it was true to the spirit of the brothers that, while waiting for the funeral to begin, they lightened their grief by placing bets on who would be the next to go. It turned out to be Harpo.

Chico was the family bad boy. Although Groucho now insists, "I always got along well with all my brothers," in truth, he and Chico continually locked horns over Chico's gambling. Even in the early days in Yorkville, Chico hocked family possessions to pay off gambling debts, and if anybody had to find Chico, he looked first in a pool parlor in Harlem. Throughout his career Groucho was forced to snatch Chico from the jaws of mobsters by paying off huge gambling debts. "Chico died broke," says Groucho. "I sup-

Observations™

Happy New Year. May 1977 be a year of joy—and fun—for you and your family. We hope you'll let us contribute to your pleasure by bringing you selected television programs we believe are something special.

Adventure. Some of history's great explorers were driven by ideals, others by greed, still others by simple curiosity. But all endured fear and discomfort, and all faced death. This month Mobil begins a 10-week series on famous and little-known explorers called Ten Who Dared. Narrated by Anthony Quinn, these hour-long documentaries, filmed on location, will take you on odysseys beginning with Christopher Columbus and climaxing with Roald Amundsen, who crossed a frozen continent in 1911 to reach the South Pole. Check your TV listings for the times and dates of the 10 episodes.

"I HOPE THE LITTLE GUY DOESN'T TURN INTO A RERUN BY JUNE"

Banjos and tambourines. Ragtime and blues, some authentic and some brand new, provide the background for a two-hour "Mobil Showcase" special, Minstrel Man, on CBS next month. Through the lives of two brothers (fictional, but inspired by real people and true events) Minstrel Man examines the roots of the black performer in America—and traces his early triumphs and some of his bitter frustrations.

Drama. With the Great War behind them, how will the Bellamys fare? They will encounter romances, scandals, tragedies, quarrels, politics and strikes. They will confront the hysterical gaiety of the Roaring Twenties in their usual unflappable manner. You can join them as "Masterpiece Theatre" presents a new series of Upstairs, Downstairs episodes. They begin January 16 on the Public Broadcasting Service. All made possible by a grant from Mobil.

Sports. The score was Green Bay 34, Dallas 27, with less than two minutes left on the clock and the National Football League championship at stake. Dallas, two yards from the goal, struggled through four downs, and couldn't tie the score. Green Bay won the 1966 crown. That memorable game is recreated on one of the 13 new episodes of The Way It Was, scheduled for broadcast on PBS starting next month. Three shows will cover the New York Yankee dynasty. Another will highlight the Joe Louis-Jersey Joe Walcott fights. Tune in for a sports show to remember.

GROUCHO

ported him in his last years."

Harpo's death, on the other hand, was particularly hard on Groucho. He was Groucho's personal favorite, and, next to himself, Groucho considered him the funniest of the Marx Brothers.

Besides admiring his talent, Groucho looked up to Harpo as a stable family man—a role one senses Groucho would have liked for himself, despite his three broken marriages. When he points out respectfully that Harpo "adopted four kids and raised them all successfully," you feel Groucho's hidden regret for the way things turned out with one of his own three children. Groucho confides that a great disappointment is his relationship with his daughter Melinda. "She hasn't come to see me since I cut off her allowance," he says. He will not talk, however, about why he stopped the payments.

Groucho's son Arthur has hinted at this darker side of Groucho's life. In Son of Groucho, an autobiography published in 1972, he talks of passing fits of miserliness, an inability on Groucho's part to display affection and a tendency for the comic genius always to treat life as one big laugh. Complained Arthur: "Go to father with a serious problem and nine times out of 10 he'll make a joke about it. The only time you can be sure he'll take a problem seriously is when it's his own. He's so impelled to live up to his image as a great wit that the urge to say something funny is virtually uncontrollable. Besides, if he shows tenderness or real understanding, it might be construed as a sign of weakness. So he throws up a smokescreen of wisecracks."

Even in an interview Groucho never lets you behind the barrier of laughter for long. He did, however, talk seriously about the anti-Semitism he suffered as a child and about the fate of millions of Jews during World War II. "While on a trip to Germany, I visited Hitler's grave," Groucho says soberly, but then he's back with a quip: "He wasn't there at the time."

We also discussed old age. His mind is still lively enough to be frustrated at memory lapses or at sudden, overwhelming fatigue. He shows his frustration by becoming irritable or even rude. But he chooses to comment on it only by using the words of his good friend, Robert Benchley: "Except for an occasional heart attack, I don't feel any older than I used to." One of the great comic geniuses of all time can still make 'em laugh. FW

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Color affects the way foods taste to us.

2. Depression is so contagious you can even catch it over the telephone.

3. Flowering plants have a positive influence on human behavior.

4. Hanging by your hands from a horizontal bar may seem silly, but it can increase both your physical and psychological endurance.

ANSWERS

1. True. A Colorado State University study on the influence of color on taste thresholds has shown that the color of what a person eats or drinks plays an important role in determining how it tastes to him. Green, for example, was found to increase sweet taste threshold sensitivity. Yellow, on the other hand, decreases taste sensitivity for sweets. Both yellow and green decrease sour taste sensitivity, and red diminishes bitter taste sensitivity.

2. True. In a series of tests, Miami University students conversed on the telephone with subjects who had been screened by psychologists as depressed and subjects who were not depressed. The study found that "following the phone conversation, those who had spoken to depressed persons were themselves more depressed, anxious, hostile and rejecting than before the conversation."

3. True. A two-month study by a team of psychiatrists has demonstrated that the presence of flowering plants in a room has a definite positive effect on mood, morale, appetite, sociability and general behavior.

4. True. In tests conducted at Emory University, men and women volunteers were subjected to this exercise each weekday for a two-week period. At the end of the period, a significant increase in muscular strength and psychological endurance was observed. FW

"My brothers suggested I join the Air Force. I checked around and found it really offered me the best deal. The Air Force has great technical schools, good benefits, and several educational opportunities.

"There's really not many things I don't like about the Air Force. I've been promoted three times during the last five years, I make a decent salary, and I like my job as a Security Policeman.

"Funny thing. I got to shake hands with two presidents while I was at Andrews Air Force Base. That went with my job there. I was assigned to a special unit responsible for the security of visiting dignitaries and heads of state.

"I guess the biggest plus of all has been the Air Force's schools. I've been to four during the last 14 months. All were connected with my job. I learned a lot. And the Community College of the Air Force is recording my training."

THE THRIFTY CHEF By Marilyn Hansen

Meal-In-A-Pot Spanish Stew

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen makes a hearty Spanish cocido. "This stew," says Marilyn, "has an especially rich, smooth flavor from the green olives."

Walter Storck

Spanish Stew satisfies big appetites with a delicious blend of beef, chicken, sausage, green olives and two kinds of beans.

MARILYN'S MENU

Spanish Stew* Mixed Green Salad
Crusty Bread Red Wine
Oranges in Red Wine * Coffee

*Recipe given

SPANISH STEW*

2 lbs. chuck steak, bone in, cut in 2" x 3" strips
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 can (16 ozs.) tomatoes in purée
1 cup water
2 large garlic cloves, minced
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
3 lbs. chicken wings or chicken wings and backs
½ lb. hot,smoked sausage, sliced
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 cup sliced carrots
1 cup chopped onion
2 cans (16-oz. size) pork and beans
1 can (16 ozs.) chick peas or garbanzo beans, undrained
1 cup sliced Spanish pimiento-stuffed green olives

1. In Dutch oven or large saucepan, brown beef strips in oil. Add tomatoes, water, garlic and pepper. Heat to boiling.
2. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 45 minutes; stir occasionally.
3. Add chicken, smoked sausage, parsley, carrots and onion.
4. Cover and simmer 30 minutes longer or until chicken is tender.
5. Stir in pork and beans, chick peas and olives. Simmer 10 minutes more.

Makes 8 to 10 servings

ORANGES IN RED WINE

¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
8 to 10 oranges
2 cups medium-dry light red wine

1. Combine sugar and cinnamon. With sharp knife remove all peel from oranges. Slice crosswise into ½-inch-thick slices; remove seeds if necessary.
2. In glass serving bowl, layer orange slices, sprinkling with sugar-cinnamon mixture. Pour red wine over all.
3. Cover and refrigerate at least 1 hour or until ready to serve.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

What's Smart: Buy bone-in chuck steak for this stew to get the protein of beef and flavor from the bone.

Chicken wings or chicken wings and backs are an economical way to buy and use chicken; excellent for stew.

Everyday canned pork and beans, at 20 to 33 cents per one-pound can, still is one of the best food buys around.

Believe it or not, 1 cup of small, stuffed sliced olives costing 79 cents adds an intriguing flavor to ten servings of stew, adding just that "something different" that takes a dish out of the ordinary.

WHAT WE CAN EXPECT FROM JIMMY CARTER

He's said he wants to be the people's lobbyist, but what does that mean?

By Jack W. Germond

Elizabeth Gee

It was exactly two years ago. Jimmy Carter was flying from Albuquerque to San Francisco on his first trip as a Presidential candidate. No one had heard of him, and he traveled unrecognized, free to chat over lunch about the constituency he felt was waiting out there to support such an audacious candidacy.

"What I've found," he said, chewing earnestly on an airline chicken breast, "is that there are a lot of people who believe no one is representing them in Washington. They don't have a lobbyist."

Thus, from the outset, Jimmy Carter was stating the theme that was to lift him from political obscurity to the pinnacle of American public life—that he would be the one to represent the unrepresented, to speak for the silent, to champion the powerless. His special concern, he said over and over again in the next two years, would be "those who are poor or rural or illiterate or inarticulate or without influence."

This theme is a reflection of Carter's conviction that our system requires lobbyists to be totally preoccupied with the self-interests of those whom they represent. He explains it in this way: "When good people organize, their lobbyists don't have any concern about the average person. For instance, there's not a better group of dedicated, sacrificial people in the world than schoolteachers. They really love the students. But when they organize, their lobbyists in the legislature or the Congress don't give a darn about the students. They are only interested in what's best for the teachers—retirement benefits, salary, working hours and so forth.

"The same with doctors. Doctors have a very deep and genuine compassion about their patients, but you get the doctors organized, and they send lobbyists from the American Medical Association who don't care anything about the patients. They want to know what's best for the doctors. The same thing applies to farmers and . . . to lawyers. It's a built-in circumstance of our system, and a Congressman who's trying to do a good job, if he only hears one side of the argument, won't think how it's going to affect the rest of the people. I want to make sure that average people have a receptive ear and a spokesman in the White House, and they will if I'm elected."

Such was the essence of the Carter candidacy. Now, Jimmy Carter has the opportunity to prove what he said—and perhaps the central criterion in judging his administration will be how well he fulfills his promise to be the lobbyist of the people over the next four years in such areas as tax reform and reorganization of the Government.

Carter has repeatedly called the present tax system "a disgrace to the human race." So his promise "to start from scratch" was a pledge to go beyond tax reform to a new system that assures fairness in a "truly progressive tax structure" based on the individual's ability to pay. If he keeps that promise, then the poor and the middle class alike are going to feel it directly every payday.

With reorganization of the Government, Carter plans to bring order and efficiency to what he calls "the horrible, bloated, confused bureaucracy." Most Americans have a difficult time imagining how the organization of the Government affects their lives. But Carter has promised, by implication at least, that his constituents will find, first, that the Government will become something with which they can deal effectively and, second, that genuine economies will be realized.

This is not going to be easy. On the contrary, restructuring the Government may be the single-most arduous assignment Jimmy Carter has given himself. Washington is a city of different peoples—on Capitol Hill, in the big law firms, in the bureaucracy itself—each with a special interest in maintaining the status quo against the revisionism of whoever temporarily occupies the White House. But the President-elect committed himself to change, and it will be fair to judge him by his success or failure in achieving it.

There are, of course, many other criteria on which Jimmy Carter will be judged four years from now: the status of inflation, unemployment, our international relations, the energy crisis—on and on. But the outsider from Georgia who takes office this month has proposed to do more than merely deal with these issues. He has promised to listen to the people and to be their lobbyist. In the final analysis, that is how he should be judged. FW

How to Wake Up the Financial Genius Inside You

"Millionaires Are Not 100 Times Smarter Than You, They Just Know The Wealth Formula"

Millionaires are not 100 or even 10 times smarter than you. But it is a fact that millionaires are making 10 to 50 and even 100 times more than you.

Are these wealthy people working that much harder than you? No way!

If you are working only 20 hours a week, it would be physically impossible. (There are only 168 hours in a week, no one gets more.)

These questions used to really stump me. That was six years ago.

My wife and I then lived in Denver, Colorado, at 2545 South High Street. We paid $135 a month rent for a cramped, tumbled down house. My wife was expecting our second child and we were flat broke. I felt desperate and forced into a corner. I had to borrow $150 from my father and another $150 from my father-in-law just to buy the groceries and pay the rent. If that wasn't enough, I was several thousand dollars in debt.

Things are much different now. Last year I could have retired and lived off the income of my one million dollars in real estate holdings. (Incidently, almost all of the income from the real estate is tax free).

Since I had worked 20 to 40 hours a week, I know that I didn't work even 10 times longer or harder than you. And with my C-average from Ames High School (located in Ames, Iowa). I'm quite certain that I'm not any smarter than you.

If hours, efforts, or brains are not what separates the rich from the average guy who is swamped with debts and very little income, then what is?

I learned the answer to that question from an old fellow in Denver. This fellow worked in a drug store stocking the shelves. Very few people knew that he had $200,000 in the bank, all of which he had earned starting from nothing.

Within a year after meeting him, I was told and shown the same thing by a young man who had recently earned over a million dollars. By this time, I began to realize that what I was being shown was truly a remarkable and workable way to grow rich.

I began to apply the principles and methods I had been shown. The results were amazing. I couldn't believe how easy it was, if fact it seemed too easy.

MARK O. HAROLDSEN
32 Year Old Millionaire

But then I met an elderly lady (83 years old) who, although not very smart, has made $117,000 using the same formula.

I then figured my beginning wasn't luck.

For three and one half years, I worked hard to refine and improve on the formula that I had been shown, so that it would be easy to get quicker results.

As I did this, my assets multiplied very rapidly (160% per year) to the point that I didn't have to work any longer.

I guess I am bragging now, but I did start spending alot of time in our back yard pool, traveling around the country, and doing a lot of loafing.

Then one day a friend asked me how he could do what I had done.

So I began to outline the formula that I had improved to show him really how simple it was, and how he could do the same thing.

By the time he approached me, I had written almost a complete volume on the easy way for him to copy my results.

I wrote this in simple, straightforward language so anyone could understand it.

This time my friend's questions were very specific. (He had already begun buying properties with the formulas I had been giving him). Now he had a property he wanted to buy, but was out of cash. How could he buy it?

I not only showed him how to buy without cash, but by the time the deal was complete, he had $5,000 cash in his pocket to boot.

I also showed him how to buy a $26,000 property for $75 down.

You, or anyone, can do exactly what I did, or my close friends have done; in fact, you may well do it better. (I began doing this in my spare time only).

It doesn't matter where you live or the size of your town or city, my formula will show you exactly how to:

- Buy income properties for as little as $100 down.
- Begin without cash.
- Put $10,000 cash in your pocket each time you buy (without selling property.)
- Double your assets every year.
- Legally avoid paying federal or state income taxes.
- Buy bargains at 1/2 their market value.
- Allow you to travel one week out of every month.

When you send me a check or money order for $10, I will send you all my formulas and methods, and you are free to use them anywhere and as often as you would like.

Now if you were a personal friend of mine, I know you would believe me and not need any kind of guarantee, but since you don't know me personally, I will guarantee that you will be completely satisfied and that my formula will work for you if you apply it. I will back up that guarantee by not cashing your check for 30 days, and if you for any reason change your mind, let me know and I will send your uncashed check back.

You may well ask, why am I willing to share my formula for wealth? Well, because many of you will probably seek further consultation and direction from me as your wealth rapidly grows and my consultation fee of $75.00 an hour adds to my fortune.

But you shouldn't care if I profit as long as you profit. And I guarantee that you will.

By the way, if you feel a little uneasy about sending me a check or money order for $10.00, simply postdate it by 30 days which will completely eliminate your risk.

Who's Liked Best?

The most popular kids, says author Joan Beck in Effective Parenting (Simon and Schuster, $8.95), aren't loved for their possessions, I.Q. or physical appearance but for their energy. So lots of rest and good nutrition will give a youngster more energy to devote to activities with others.

What Every Woman Should Know About Her Credit Standing

Until recently, working women, married or single, were pretty much nonentities as far as banks and loan institutions were concerned. Getting a credit card was considered a major accomplishment. Getting a loan—without your husband's signature—was next to impossible. Well, now all that's changed with the passage of state and Federal laws dealing with credit discrimination. To find out just what's changed you should read Borrowing Basics for Women. This free booklet explains all you need to know about such things as how to establish credit, how to make yourself eligible to borrow money or get a mortgage, how you can make sure your credit history is fair and accurate . . . even how and where to report credit discrimination because of sex or marital status. To get the booklet, write to the Public Affairs Department WB, Citibank, 399 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10022.

NADIA COMANECI
Gymnastics For A Healthier Childhood

Gymnastics may well be the world's most beautiful sport. And ever since Olga Korbut's and Nadia Comaneci's triumphs in the Olympics, there has been an explosion of interest in gymnastics, particularly for women. U.S. Olympic Team Gymnastics Coach Jim Gault says that if one were to typecast a successful gymnast, it would be a shorter-than-average person, who is wiry, slim and very muscular. Normally, any accomplished gymnast will possess these physical attributes: strength, range of motion at the joints, muscular control, endurance, coordination and timing, agility, running speed, balance and an ability to function with the body in the air or upside-down. For the best possible results, training should begin by the age of eight, nine or 10. Classical ballet training is important if not essential. Also, remember that gymnastics necessitates a tremendous amount of repetition—one must do the same thing over and over until it becomes an accomplished movement. For many people this type of activity can seem like a terrific waste of time. Children must possess an unusual amount of maturity in order to understand the value and necessity of practice and to see their way through it.

How To Get Your Child's School Records

Parents, and students over 18 years old, now have a right to inspect the student's record. Nearly all schools and colleges must comply, thanks to new regulations of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). These accessible records include grades, disciplinary action and staff comments that might influence a student's future. You can even ask that a false or damaging statement be amended or removed. If the school refuses to make a change, you can have a hearing with a school official. For further details, write: HEW, Room 514E, South Portal Building, Washington, D.C. 20201.

Student Drinking Habits

Some education officials, reacting to surveys showing that more than one-third of all high-school seniors drink hard liquor, are trying to reach students at an early age. In Jacksonville, Fla., for instance, they are testing a program that teaches fifth and sixth graders about alcohol. The age levels were chosen after a survey showed that 3.5 percent of the boys and .5 percent of the girls in the sixth grade drank hard liquor. The purpose of the course is to correct misconceptions and to give the pupils some basis on which to make a responsible judgment.

America's Favorite Tourist Attraction

What is the single-most popular man-made tourist attraction in the United States? Would you believe Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla.? The park reports 58 million paid admissions. Disneyland in California has had 11 million visitors push through its turnstiles. Adults outnumbered children by four to one.

How To Get Your Mutt Into Society

Every little dog will have his day if Gabriel A. Bonnet has his way. The Grand Junction, Colo. dog owner has formed the American Registered Mutt Association (ARMA). For a $3 fee, anyone who has a mutt can have it registered with the association and receive "an official certificate suitable for framing." Bonnet, who is a pediatrician, says, "Mutts have been discriminated against," adding that he bought his dog—Wippin J. Whapsaddle—for $2 at a seed store. Bonnet claims that nearly 300 dogs have been registered. If every mutt owner in America sent in $3, no doubt the good doctor could retire from his practice. For registration information, write: ARMA, 819 27½ Rd. Grand Junction, Colo. 81501.

(GENUINE BELGIUM PENDULA BEGONIA)

BEGONIA

Complete With Hanging Basket 10¢

BLOOMS INDOORS OR OUT, EASY GROWING, NEEDS LITTLE SUNLIGHT

Truly beautiful, a heavenly Trailing Begonia . . . the variety that blooms indoors or outdoors with a myriad of exquisite red flowers which cascade all over the hanging basket into a "living falls" of vivid color, enhanced by a background of fresh green foliage. You receive a large healthy Belgium tuber, complete with hanging basket that you watch grow into the most colorful, brilliant, and gay of all hanging gardens. Yours for only 10c — and that's just the beginning!

THIS AMAZING 10c OFFER STARTS YOUR VALUABLE EXPERIMENTAL MEMBERSHIP IN THE WORLD'S LARGEST GARDENING PLAN

Now that gardening has become so popular wouldn't it be wonderful to know that you always have first pick of top quality planting stock? And isn't it even better yet to know that you pay bottom dollar for top quality? That's exactly what Flower of the Month does for people like you who love to watch flowers grow and explode into bloom! And here's how . . .

Our buyers are constantly in the garden market, world-wide, looking for selections that measure up to our specifications for beauty, color, and ease of growth.

When we locate what we consider an outstanding garden value, we can purchase it at an amazingly low price because of our tremendous buying power. Often we buy practically the entire crop! These enormous savings are passed on to our members. Indoor house plants . . . perennials . . . world famous rose bush varieties . . . fruit and vegetable plants . . . trees, shrubs, and hedges . . . fall planting bulbs . . . introductions of new varieties for home gardens . . . all these and more are offered to members at honest-to-goodness discount prices.

HOW THE PLAN WORKS

Each month you will receive the GARDEN NEWS Magazine, which will feature in full color that month's recommendation, plus other interesting horticultural items we may have discovered. You always have the option to accept that month's recommendation or not. Our only requirement is that you accept four selections within the next 12 months. Over 100 selections will be offered, ranging in price from $1.00 up.

(Important . . . we do not send any flower selections that you choose not to accept. That would make about as much sense as your local bakery sending you a dozen rolls you didn't order. The idea of the plan is to give you good service, professional guidance in the planning and care of your garden, and money-saving prices).

THE PLAN OPERATES ON MUTUAL TRUST — ANY SELECTION YOU CHOOSE TO ACCEPT IS STRICTLY "ON APPROVAL"

You always have the opportunity to receive your selection at home and not pay for it until you have inspected it. There are no dues, no risk, you may cancel your membership at any time after accepting as few as 4 recommendations within one year. Furthermore, you are fully protected, both when you join and thereafter:

1. If you are not completely satisfied with your introductory Trailing Begonia, you may return it within 10 days and cancel your membership with no further obligation.
2. You must be completely satisfied with any future selection you receive or you may return it within 10 days and your account will immediately be credited.

We know you will be delighted with the fine quality and big savings Flower of the Month offers you. Send for your Trailing Begonia with hanging basket today. See for yourself if this isn't the most amazing flower offer you've seen anywhere, anytime.

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

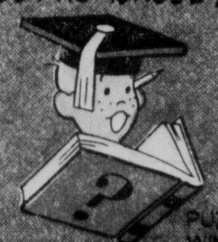
LEWIS PERSCHY OF ALEXANDRIA, LA, ASKS:

"WHY DOES A SNAKE STICK OUT ITS TONGUE?"



A SNAKE DOESN'T STICK OUT ITS TONGUE TO SCARE YOU. THE FORKED TONGUE IS FOR TOUCHING AND HELPING THE SNAKE TO SMELL. THE SNAKE FLICKS OUT ITS LONG TONGUE, PICKING UP ODORS FROM THE AIR. THEN IT FLICKS ITS TONGUE BACK IN AND TOUCHES TWO SMALL HOLES IN THE ROOF OF ITS MOUTH. THE HOLES WORK SOMETHING LIKE A NOSE. THEY SEND MESSAGES OF SMELL TO THE BRAIN. BY FLICKING ITS TONGUE, THE SNAKE CAN PICK UP THE SCENT OF FOOD AND SENSE DANGER.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — If you have a comfortable pair of pants that are too short, find some material that goes well with the fabric (perhaps a print), and add as much as needed to the bottom and then sew on matching knee patches, which will also make the knees stronger. — SARAH, age 12.

•

DEAR POLLY — Black heel marks that seem impossible to remove will respond to the use of toothpaste. Put a generous amount of any brand on a brush, and scrub. The marks will soon disappear. — KAY.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — I wanted to sew a foam rubber-type of seat cover for our car but ran into a real problem. It would not move on the sewing machine so I put a piece of clear plastic over it and could see to sew right through it. When the sewing was finished the plastic was torn away and had done its job well. — JUDY.

•

DEAR POLLY — The oldest of my seven children has a new idea for keeping cool while weeding in a hot garden. He filled a pair of rubber boots (the kind that slip over shoes in winter) with cold water, put them on when he was barefooted and weeded standing up. This would not be very appealing to an adult, but does put a bit of fun into weeding, for the kids. — CAROL.

•

DEAR POLLY — I cut off the elastic part of torn socks to use as sweat bands for basketball, tennis, etc. — TERESA.

DEAR POLLY — Keep a roll of two-inch gummed tape to use for putting strips over the addresses on return envelopes that are not going to be used for a reply. Such envelopes with the address written on the strip are fine for paying bills. — MRS. G.R.B.

•

DEAR POLLY — When a small, rubberized, cosmetic case became slightly worn and torn, I continued to use it to hold a fresh bar of soap while traveling. The soap can be returned to the case immediately after each bath or shower. — J.Z.

•

DEAR POLLY — I press my tape measure between pieces of waxed paper to give it more body. — MYRTLE.

•

DEAR POLLY — I go on many camping trips and labels on our tents say no sprays are allowed. I now put bug repellent in an old roll-on deodorant bottle and now just roll it on and I don't miss the spray at all. — CONI.
